[illegible] that they plan to [illegible] on a short [illegible] trip to Cuba. [illegible] to [illegible] to communicate with guerrillas who are operating in the [illegible]. They believe that they can [illegible] these people by [illegible] and which the conversation is [illegible]. The [illegible] will then be translated into English and sent by [illegible] to the Embassies in the U.S. I believed to all of this and finally Mr. [illegible] said that [illegible] to coordinate this with [illegible] the Party approval. I immediately [illegible] that this was completely [illegible] and of his authority and this [illegible] had nothing to do with Fidel's [illegible] and that it seemed to me that [illegible] would be the [illegible] for him to consider. [illegible] that they had already consulted the [illegible] that because of the fact that [illegible] diplomatic relations with [illegible] and [illegible]. I [illegible] that this was not Cuba's business and that [illegible] relations were decided by the State Department.

[illegible] finally said that if they were able to meet [illegible] the [illegible] of Cuba and they did decide [illegible] that they [illegible] to which this information [illegible] whether [illegible] to broadcast it in the U.S. I [illegible] told Mr. Taylor that [illegible] the right of [illegible], then this [illegible] and that the [illegible] the [illegible] they might [illegible] the [illegible].
