Other Title(s): Captain's LogsDeck LogsRough LogsShip LogsSmooth Logs

Function and Use: Deck logs were created to form a chronological account of notable events occurring in and around a ship (or other command, as appropriate), to serve as a reminder to the officers of the deck of their various duties, and to serve as a check on the activities of the officers of the deck. They were also maintained to serve as potential evidence in legal proceedings in naval, admiralty, or civil courts.

General Note(s): These records are often referred to as deck logs, or by more colloquial terms, such as ship logs, captain's logs, smooth logs, or rough logs.

Arrangement: Arranged into chronological segments: 1941-1950, 1951-1955, 1956-1960, 1961-1965, 1966-1970, 1971-1975, 1976-1978, and 1979-1983. The first chronological segment is arranged into four distinct subseries: named ships appear first, followed by unnamed ships, craft, and other vessels, and then followed by a small number of shore units. The fourth subseries consists of small format "patrol logs," mostly submitted by unnamed vessels such as motor patrol boats (PT-boats), arranged alphabetically by hull classification symbol and thereunder numerically by hull number. In the subsequent chronological segments, all named ships precede any unnamed vessels. Named ships are arranged alphabetically by first letter of each ship's name. Unnamed vessels are arranged alphabetically by hull classification symbol and thereunder numerically by hull number. Individual logbooks are arranged chronologically by date and thereunder arranged chronologically by the time of day as indicated on the 24-hour

Navy Deck Logs Available in the National Archives Catalog

Aircraft carrier USS Saratoga (CV-60)
View in National Archives Catalog

Deck logs for naval vessels were created to form a chronological account of notable events occurring in and around a ship, to remind the officers of the deck of their duties, and to check on the activities of the officers. They also served as evidence in legal proceedings in naval, admiralty, or civil courts when necessary.

The National Archives has embarked on a multi-year project to digitize these deck logs which are some of our most requested records. Below you can follow links to the deck logs that we have completely digitized and are available to view in the National Archives Catalog.

If you are interested in deck logs that available from the list below, please contact the textual reference staff at Archives II in College Park, MD by emailing archives2reference@nara.gov. To learn more about these records, please see A History of Naval Deck Logs.

Tips for Searching for an Individual's Name

- Search on the person's full name in first name-last name order.
- Search on the surname only. The records might only include a first initial or a variant spelling of the first name.
- Search on variant spellings of the surname using OR, for example: Luchetti OR Lucetti.
- Search on variant spellings of the first name, including "Americanized" versions, for example: Joseph Maggio OR Guiseppe Maggio.
- Keep in mind that most descriptions in the National Archives Catalog do not include the names of individuals in that record. However, the National Archives still might have records about your ancestors. If you know an individual participated in an event, search for that search term and look within the records for your ancestor.

Commemorating D-Day

Last week the National Archives commemorated the 74th anniversary of D-Day and the Normandy Invasion. On June 6, 1944, Allied troops in World War II began their invasion of Normandy, which was part of the larger Operation Overlord. Now known as D-Day, it was the culmination of the Allied powers' strategy for the war and a multinational effort.

The National Archives has many records related to D-Day and its surrounding events. Today we bring you records documenting the preparation and invasion, as well as charts, radar images and drawings related to the D-Day invasion.

Click on each image to see a larger, zoomable version in our Catalog.
