1. Summary: April 8 wireservice report from Montevideo indicates that CGT SecGen Herreras may depart shortly for Mexico. We hope AFL-CIO will feel that its obligation to Herreras will have been met with his arrival in Mexico, and will make no further effort to promote a visit to US. Our continuing consultations with labor sources convince us that no useful purpose would be served by such a visit. Additionally, his presence in US could create problem for USG. End Summary.

2. April 8 press carried Latin wireservice report that CGT SecGen Herreras will be given permission to depart Montevideo for Mexico. We hope his arrival there will signal end of AFL-CIO efforts on his behalf. Additional development and further discussions with Argentine labor leaders have reinforced our conviction that it could be unfortunate for our relations if Herreras should visit AFL-CIO at this time.

3. Embassy has been unofficially advised that military is presently considering possibility of asking for Herreras' extradition on criminal charges evolving from his financial activities. Should he be in US when (and if) extradition requested, this could become thorny and embarrassing issue in US-Argentine bilateral relations.

4. Herreras' situation has been discussed with wide range of labor contacts, including those (Elorza, Alvarez and Lopez) mentioned by McLellan (State 081223). The unanimous opinion of all those contacted is that Herreras is finished insofar as Argentine labor is concerned. Most felt that AFL-CIO was wasting its time and effort on a discredited "dead horse." They noted that in Argentina labor leaders normally end their cycle by being killed, but that Herreras is one of the fortunate ones as he is a "living corpse." Accordingly, they felt that US labor should concentrate on future and not worry about assisting a "has-been." Sources believed that with the money Herreras has managed to accumulate, he himself will wish to forget labor matters and enjoy his exile. (Note: For the record, Embassy never proposed that AFL-CIO support Herreras for ILO post, as suggested in State 081223. Argentine We merely relayed/labor leaders' requests for that support.)

5. Although Elorza, Alvarez and Lopez say it would have been better if Herreras had not rpt not been invited to US, now that invitation has been extended they see no graceful way in which AFL/CIO can withdraw it. But even so, they believe visit should not rpt not take place. While they have no doubts that Herreras is finished in Argentina, he may have some role inter- nationally with ILO for perhaps a few months. Further, they point out that he did perform some useful services-- e.g. affiliation of CGT with ICFTU, intensified activities in democratic, international labor affairs, and closer cooperation with AFL/CIO. It was on this basis, and because of their personal affection for Herreras that they had asked AFL/CIO to help him in Uruguay, where they were concerned for his personal safety. They believe AFL/ CIO was right to help him--though they do not believe help necessarily had to include an invitation to US. ~~Had they~~

~~Had they not helped him they see no further need for AFL/CIO~~

~~Had they not helped him they see no further need for AFL/CIO~~ (Note: From labor viewpoint, their conviction that AFL/CIO should have helped Herreras is not surprising.

However, the manner in which trade union rep Warren in Montevideo involved Embassy and USG in the case is in our view indefensible.

6. Comment: Embassy continues to feel strongly that Herreras' presence in US at this time would be inimical to interests of USG.

4. In absence of a clear policy, at least three distinct groups of labor leaders have formed, with each group seeking to become focal point of negotiations with military. Individual labor leaders and smaller groups are also maneuvering for future leadership positions. The only group which has received any publicity is one led by Health Workers Federation (FATSA) SecGen Otto Calace. Representing approximately 65 small unions and previously ousted leaders of Railway Union (UF), group was frustrated in attempts to hold formal discussions with CGT Interventor Fabrizi and MinLabor Liendo. They are now meeting with lower level military officers. This group hopes to replace leaders of major unions, whom they believe military will exclude from future leadership roles.

5. A second important group represents leaders of several major unions, including those who negotiated with military prior to coup. During April 13 meeting they decided to remain apart from Calace's group, although they are not antagonistic to majority of leaders collaborating with Calace. An emissary of group held lengthy meeting with Gen Viola evening same day in effort to convince military to work with "salvageable" major leaders. Labatt informed that Viola requested that they be patient "for another eight days" to permit military to resolve differences and adopt definite policy. Individual leaders within group have also been holding conversations with colonels designated by Fabrizi, but they report their dissatisfaction with such dealings. They have not received satisfactory responses and believe that their position has not been brought to attention of Videla. Several leaders of this group have advised Labatt they will "be forced to seek assistance from friendly foreign unions and trade secretariats (ITSES)" if action isn't forthcoming soon.

6. A third group which appears to have possibility of influencing events is now being formed around metal workers union (UOM) leader, Buenos Aires Province ex-Governor Calabro. On April 13 Calabro reassumed control of important Vicente Lopez UOM local. Calabro, if he can survive investigation into his allegedly corrupt activities, is heir apparent to powerful metal workers union. He is also making contact with non-metal workers union leaders.

7. The neo-Vandorist Group of Eight (see A-253, 8/12/74), as visibly represented by Paper Workers leader Donaires, Municipal Workers leader Izzetta and Soft Drink Workers chief Racchini, is apparently playing its own game. They have met with each of above three groups and have reportedly expressed sympathy with each one. However, they have joined none of them.

8. Comment. Future of organized labor in Argentina is still uncertain. Despite uncertainty and precarious
