

2018 VIRTUAL GENEALOGY FAIR

Welcome!

The National Archives and Records Administration is pleased to present this educational event on how to do family research.

As the nation's premier genealogy institution, it is our mission to inform the public about the National Archives' holdings that relate to family history and to make those holdings available.

About the Lectures

Lectures demonstrate how to use Federal records and other resources for genealogical research for beginning to experienced family historians.

Archivist of the United States David S. Ferriero will provide opening remarks. Executive for Research Services Ann Cummings will provide closing remarks.

Our presenters include experts from the National Archives nationwide while broadcasting live from our facilities in Washington, DC and St. Louis, MO.
