Welcome!

The National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) is pleased to present this educational series of lectures on how to do family research.

As one of the nation’s premier genealogy institutions, it is our mission to inform the public about the National Archives’ holdings that relate to family history and to make those holdings available.
About the Lecture Series

Lectures demonstrate how to use federal records and other resources for genealogical research for beginning to experienced family historians. Our presenters include experts from the National Archives nationwide representing our facilities in College Park, MD; Denver, CO; New York City, NY; St. Louis, MO; and Washington, DC.

Chat, Captioning, Handout & Event Evaluation

After the broadcast, the video presentation and handout will remain available.
The National Archives Building in Washington, DC contains many records about noncombatant civilians connected with the Union Army during the American Civil War. However, the records are underutilized because there is no comprehensive index, no “one” place to look, and require time-consuming research into obscure records. Digitization is slowly changing that, however! This lecture will provide suggestions for research with emphasis on online materials that can help you get started.
Claire Kluskens is the Genealogy and Census Subject Matter Expert at the National Archives in Washington, DC. She spearheaded the completion of more than 330 National Archives microfilm publications and now works on digital and description projects for the National Archives Catalog and NARA website. She lectures frequently and has published extensively in national, state, and local genealogical publications. Claire has been a National Archives and Records Administration staff member since 1992 and has done genealogical research since 1976.

Long list of record series that might be useful—

But where do you begin???
Teamsters and Wagonmasters (continued)

Klusken's article: Wagonmasters Serving the Union During the Civil War, online at www.archives.gov/research/military/civil-war/union/wagonmasters.html

Research Tips: Of all the above series, Series 238, Reports of Persons and Articles Hired, 1818-1905, is the mother lode of documentation for civilian quartermaster employees. This would be a natural starting point for further research, after first consulting its index in Series 228. For wagonmasters employed in 1861 (who do not appear in the card list transcribed for this article) supplemental help might appear in Entry 240, Record of Personal Services, 1861. As the search proceeds, information on the commanding officer's career might be found in several places--particularly his compiled military service record (RG 94, Records of the Adjutant General's Office) and possible pension file (RG 15, Records of the Veterans Administration), as well as, perhaps, other record series in RG 94. Any of this material might be useful for pinning down the date span during which the officer was stationed at a particular place and, by extension, delimiting the time period during which the civilian wagonmaster could have been employed at that station by that officer. In general, it is often possible to document an ancestor's civilian service during wartime, although particular cases may prove difficult. As with all genealogical research, the essentials for success are patience, persistence, imagination, and a good understanding of available records.

The entry for June 27, 1863, mentions receiving information from U.S. Marshal Carr that Moses Merrit Greenwood of New Orleans, Louisiana, “was suspected of being a spy.” (Page 19). The entry for October 30, 1863, discusses Elam Church, who was newly arrested as a reported deserter from Company G, 1st Connecticut Artillery Regiment. He had enlisted in March 1862, but was discharged from military service in April 1862 because he had enlisted at age 16 without his father’s consent. The father provided evidence of these facts and the young man was released from custody. (Page 27).
