Calling all techies!

Explore the Catalog API

We'd like to introduce you to the National Archives Catalog API. The API (or "application programming interface"), is a technology that allows computer programs or web applications created by the public to interact with our Catalog's dataset. (Read more about APIs in government.)

The dataset for the Catalog API contains all archival descriptions, authority records, digitized records (the images, videos, and so on) and their file metadata, all National Archives web pages, and public contributions (tags, transcriptions, and comments). The API allows citizen developers to retrieve structured archival metadata for any given record or search results set. The API is also writable, which means you can use it to post tags, transcriptions, or comments to records. We believe it is one of the first public write APIs in operation at a cultural institution.
Our API is still relatively new, and there may be some kinks to work out. But we encourage you to give it a try and see what you can create with it. The API is located at https://catalog.archives.gov/api/v1/, but we also recommend you start out by checking out some of our other documentation to learn the ropes:

Catalog API on GitHub

Interactive API Sandbox

Also, be sure to give us feedback (whether questions, bug reports, or ideas for improvement) in our GitHub repo issue tracker or by emailing api@nara.gov. Let us know what you make!

---

New and interesting records in the Catalog

Henry Morgenthau, Jr.: Diaries, 4/27/1933-7/21/1945

Consists of over 850 diary volumes documenting the public career of Henry Morgenthau, Jr. as head of the Farm Credit Administration and Secretary of the Treasury during the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Economic Cooperation Administration: Country Files of the Mutual Security Program, 1950-1951

Geographic files on defense issues for eight countries in Western Europe and the Far East.

Federal Open Market Committee: Current Economic Reports by District aka The "Redbook", 5/1970-12/1983
Narrative reports providing comments on economic conditions and economic outlooks.

Questions or comments? Email us at catalog@nara.gov.