Hu-fo, 1895-1972

Biographical Note: John Edgar Hoover (1895-1972) served from 1924 to 1972 as the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). As its first director, Hoover molded the FBI into his image of a modern police force. He promoted scientific investigation of crime, the collection and analysis of fingerprints and the hiring and training of professional law enforcement agents. Though much of what Hoover accomplished during his long tenure was exemplary, his use of counterintelligence techniques went beyond the collection of criminal information to include building dossiers on prominent lawmakers and citizens. Over time his rigid morality and anti-Communism dominated the FBI, forcing agents to follow the Hoover line or be drummed out of the agency. By the 1960s Hoover's power was immense, yet the civil rights and antiwar movements would do much to discredit his tactics. Since his departure the FBI has sought to purge this part of his legacy from the organization.

Hoover was born on January 1, 1895 in Washington D.C. After earning two law degrees from Washington University in 1916, Hoover joined the U.S. Department of Justice, a department he would never leave. During World War I and the years immediately after it, Hoover investigated political radicals accused of subversive activities. In 1919 he was appointed chief of the department's General Intelligence Division (GID), a unit which enabled Hoover to collect thousands of names of alleged subversives. Hoover used these lists to carry out the so-called "Palmer Raids" in 1920. These raids resulted in the arrest and deportation of thousands of aliens.

Tips for searching on a person's name

- Keep in mind that most descriptions are not indexed by name.
- OPA does not contain descriptions for all files and items that include individuals' names.
- The National Archives still might have records about your ancestors.
- Try to:
 - Search on the person's full name (first name last name or last name first name). Try quotes to make it an “exact phrase” search.
 - Search on the surname only. The records might only include a first initial or a variant spelling of the first name.
 - Search on variant spellings of the surname, for example: Freyer or Frier.
 - Search on variant spellings of the first name, for example: “Lev” or “Lebe.”
