National Declassification Center Prioritization Plan

I. Summary

On 29 December 2009, President Obama signed Executive Order 13526 (E.O. 13526), creating the National Declassification Center (NDC) under the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA), and a memo entitled “Implementation of the Executive Order, Classified National Security Information.” The following day, Archivist of the United States David Ferriero established the NDC to achieve the goals of ensuring that records are reviewed timely and efficiently, and making these records available to the public. Once the center was established, the acting NDC director began drafting a prioritization plan in compliance with section 3.7(d) of E.O. 13526, for the declassification review and public release of classified records held by NARA. By offering a draft prioritization plan for public comment in May, the NDC was able to gain input from NARA’s customers, to include researchers, the general public, the media and Federal agencies; and the Public Interest Declassification Board’s (PIDB)¹ recommendation that records of high public interest receive declassification priority. This final plan incorporates that input. The NDC Director will use this plan to prioritize declassification and the adjudication of referrals in the Interagency Referral Center (IRC)² and the Remote Archives Capture (RAC)³ programs.

The plan was developed to ensure that declassification resources are applied in a thorough and consistent manner, while focusing on those records of the highest public interest.

II. Prioritization Method

To achieve the NDC goal of making declassified records available to the public, three factors affected how records will be prioritized:

- 1) High Public Interest – The NDC will use a variety of sources, including public input through a variety of social media technologies, and information about records requested in the NARA research rooms, and by the public through the Freedom of Information Act, the Presidential Records Act and Mandatory Declassification Review provisions of E.O. 13526⁴, to determine the level of public interest.

To assist in determining level of public interest, the group developing the prioritization plan consulted with NARA reference staff. Based on a February 2008 report, 30 record groups (RGs) account for 60%

¹ The Public Interest Declassification Board is an advisory committee established by Congress in order to promote the fullest possible public access to a thorough, accurate, and reliable documentary record of significant U.S. national security decisions and activities.

² The Interagency Referral Center was developed in 2006 by NARA as part of the National Declassification Initiative (NDI). The IRC was a voluntary program that consolidated review and referral (information within a document that is potentially classified by another agency) of Federal records in NARA custody into one central location within the National Archives at College Park. The IRC is now mandatory and part of the NDC.

⁴ Researchers may submit FOIA and MDR requests for records at NARA that are not yet available to the public.

of all records pulled at Archives II. The group identified the following topics or areas of high researcher interest based on that report:

Of the 30 high-volume record groups, NARA received the most requests for the following:

- Department of State – RGs 59, 84, and 306
- Navy (Ships and Deck Logs) – RGs 19 and 24
- Army (Units in WWII, Korea and Vietnam) – RGs 407 and 472
- OSS – RG 226. Additionally, many requests are received for record series containing POW/MIA and policy- level military information from the following record groups: 218, 319, 330, 338, and 342.

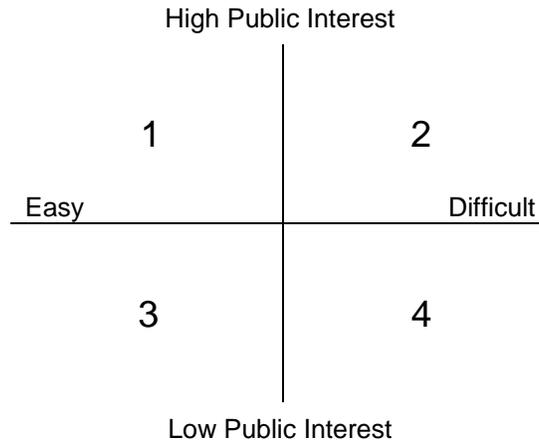

After releasing the draft prioritization plan, we received comments suggesting that we go into greater detail (such as specific offices within a record group) in discussing our planning. We agree that certain series should be targeted first. Often these records will be older, policy-level records that will shed significant light on how the United States conducted its defense and foreign policy as far back as the 1940s. Similarly, there were several comments suggesting the top priority be given to Diplomatic and Defense records that would “fill in the gap” about important events from the 1940s through 1970s. NDC staff will consider these suggestions when developing annual work plans and seeking out series of records where such information is contained. A different perspective was that the NDC should focus not on the “most popular” or oldest records, but rather on those records most likely to document the rights and benefits due to citizens. Our hope is that we can blend such series into each annual plan as a means of balancing agency workload. Other comments suggested that we take a more topical approach, such as was done with the JFK records. While we agree that these are records of high interest, taking a topical as opposed to a provenance-based approach will not allow us to complete the presidential requirement of clearing the currently 407 million page backlog by the end of 2013. NDC staff will seek to identify records series that may contain information relating to assassinations or high profile events and include such series in the annual work plans. Finally, some suggested that the NDC go out to agencies and look for caches of classified records that have not yet been turned over to NARA. While we acknowledge that agencies may retain sensitive permanently valuable records beyond their scheduled transfer date, it is not the mandate of the NDC to compel transfer. The NDC has begun working with NARA’s Lifecycle Management Division and agency records officers to facilitate the timely transfer of permanent classified records to NARA.

- 2) Likelihood of Declassification – Factors include complexity of information, volume of tabs (exemptions, exclusions, referrals) and age of material. There are a number of less sensitive classified collections which may lend themselves to quick turnaround, while other collections contain very sensitive information that must be protected under E.O. 13526 and will not offer significant public release.
- 3) Resources Required to Complete Declassification – Some RGs have information that must be protected under the provisions established in E.O. 13526 and contain multiple referrals to other equity-holding agencies. Addressing interagency referrals is labor intensive for the participating agencies in the NDC. Performing declassification is more difficult and requires more time for records with multiple referrals. Researcher interest would determine how these records fit into the prioritization plan.

THE NATIONAL DECLASSIFICATION CENTER
Releasing All We Can, Protecting What We Must

To apply these criteria to classified records and develop a balanced plan, the NDC developed a matrix that places classified records in one of four categories. The categories are illustrated on a four quadrant diagram (figure 1).

The following definitions were applied to each axis:

- The horizontal axis represents the likelihood of declassification and the level of effort required to move records through the NDC to the open shelf.
 - Records determined to be “Easy” have few referrals and/or have a high probability of declassification.
 - Records determined to be “Difficult” contain multiple referrals and/or have most of the documents exempted under E.O. 13526.
- The vertical axis shows the level of public interest in the declassification of the records (as defined above).

Using these definitions each category (quadrant on Figure 1) was then defined as:

- Category 1 (High Interest, Easy to Process) – 1% of the backlog
- Category 2 (High Interest, Difficult to Process) – 90% of the backlog of Federal records and 100% of Presidential materials referred through the RAC.
- Category 3 (Low Interest, Easy to Process) – 2% of the backlog
- Category 4 (Low Interest, Difficult to Process) – 7% of the backlog

Initially the NDC will devote the majority of resources to the records in categories one and two, with fewer resources devoted to categories three and four.

Using this matrix model, NDC placed the classified RGs and Presidential materials into one of the four categories. Each RG will be examined, and series will be selected for processing. Those series selected first will be those identified as having a combination of high research value and high likelihood of declassification, as well as to balance and leverage agency resources. Input from the public through open forums, Blog postings and comments provided to NDC@nara.gov will continue to be considered when selecting which series to process first. Finally, the NDC will allocate series for processing for opening. The NDC will use this information to prioritize review of records in the RAC system and the IRC, and to develop annual work plans that will focus on the highest priority records for declassification review and release.

Releasing All We Can, Protecting What We Must

III. Prioritization Plan

Within the NDC there will be two separate workflows:

- Quality Assurance review and release of the eligible material within the currently 407 million page backlog of Federal records cited in the President's Memo⁵;
- Declassification review and release of interagency referrals of eligible Federal records through the IRC, and Presidential records referred through the RAC.

Declassification Review and Interagency Referrals

By analyzing the goals and deadlines for each of these processes the NDC has determined that - for Federal records - the primary focus must be eliminating the backlog. The most efficient approach to doing this is to apply the archival principle of provenance and process records for release at the series (or entry) level. For Federal records, the processing of interagency Federal referrals will be a secondary focus. This approach will make the largest volume of declassified records available to the public in the shortest period of time. The NDC will concentrate the majority of the declassification review resources on Federal records that fall into categories one and two of the prioritization plan, with fewer resources utilized on categories three and four.

For Presidential Materials, the initial priority will be processing high interest Presidential records in the RAC. Referrals for Federal records will continue to be processed with a focus similar to that of the backlog, that is, level of researcher interest and likelihood of declassification.

Using input from the public (open forum, request for comments, NDC Blog and email), reference archivists at Archives II and the Office of Presidential Libraries, the chart below outlines the top priorities for the backlog and interagency referrals. Appendix A lists a more detailed breakdown including specific entry and volume quantity available as of 1 January 2010. (These numbers will change as these records are processed for declassification.)

⁵ In section 2 of the President's memo he states "Under the direction of the National Declassification Center (NDC), and utilizing recommendations of an ongoing Business Process Review in support of the NDC, referrals and quality assurance problems within a backlog of more than 400 million pages of accessioned Federal records previously subject to automatic declassification shall be addressed in a manner that will permit public access to all declassified records from this backlog no later than December 31, 2013."

The annual goals and resource allocations for processing and review of Federal and Presidential records in the NDC will be approved by the NDC Director in consultation with Office of Presidential Libraries, NDC management, agencies participating in the NDC, and the public. The NDC Director will provide each agency with a list of NDC priorities to guide their declassification work planning, the volume of

Releasing All We Can, Protecting What We Must

Federal and Presidential records in their review queues under the NDC, and review deadlines for records under the NDC. Agencies will be expected to provide a sufficient number of reviewers to meet established NDC goals, or accept automatic declassification of their equities as outlined in E.O. 13526. This plan sets the priorities for this fiscal year.

This prioritization plan will serve as the high-level map to guide the NDC in reaching the President's goal of backlog elimination by the end of 2013. It will be updated as needed, taking into account speed of processing, availability of resources, agency participation, and a better understanding of researcher interest.

As noted, this plan will guide our more detailed annual work plans. The FY11 work plans, contained here as Appendices B and C, will also be available on the website NARA and Declassification, and regular updates will be posted to the NDC Blog.

IV. Public Input

The NDC is committed to focusing our efforts on those records determined to be of high public interest. We have involved the public by providing the draft for comment, establishing a blog for dialog and hosting an open forum. We plan to continue this outreach and expand upon it by sharing our successes and challenges and continuing the discussion. For example, a suggestion was made to survey outstanding FOIA requests for classified records as a means of determining researcher interest. A follow-on Business Process Reengineering effort examining FOIA processing is gathering that exact data. When it is available, by the end of 2010, it will be an additional measure that the NDC will use in assessing potential interest.

The NDC will update prioritization plans as high priority records are declassified and priorities change. We will continue to use social media tools to encourage and collect public input for future updates. Through these efforts we will maintain a plan that strives to meet the expectations of the public and the President's vision for an interagency National Declassification Center.
