Prime Minister Blair: [Redacted]

The President: Sounds to me like you got some pretty good language with Chirac on the European Security issue. (e)

Prime Minister Blair: [Redacted]

The President: I just don't want to give the isolationists here any encouragement. (e)

Prime Minister Blair: I appreciate that. [Redacted]

The President: I agree. You are doing the right thing, and I am behind you. (e)

Prime Minister Blair: I think it might be helpful, if at some stage, I came over and saw some of the people on the Hill and made a speech. (e)

The President: I agree with that. (e)

Prime Minister Blair: [Gap] [Redacted]

The President: Let me ask you one other thing. I hear Chirac wouldn't go along with the position you wanted to take on Cyprus. (e)

(C)

The President: No, I just heard something and it may not be right. The main thing, I know what Simitis wants you to say. But it would be good if it didn't leak until as close to the 10th as possible. That would give us a week to get these talks, (with Denktash), in New York, and I don't want to give him any excuse to leave. ~~(C)~~

The President: That's good news. ~~(C)~~

Prime Minister Blair: Incidentally, I thought you did brilliantly in Florence. (U)

The President: Oh, thanks. (U)

Prime Minister Blair: You made a big impression on Jospin. ~~(C)~~

The President: I tried to make him see that you and I were not threatening everything he believes in. ~~(C)~~

Prime Minister Blair: It would be really good to get together in the next few months. I have so much that I would like to go through with you. ~~(C)~~

The President: When would be good? Is January better for you than February? ~~(C)~~

Prime Minister Blair: We will see what we can arrange. If it's not a summit in Bermuda, we can try something else. ~~(C)~~

The President: I will look for something on the calendar. We will do a statement on devolution and will clear it with you in advance. ~~(C)~~

Prime Minister Blair: Okay Bill, all the best. (U)
