

“How His Voice Has Changed!” March 4, 1920

Before the 1920 Presidential election, perennial candidate William Jennings Bryan announced he did not desire the Democratic Presidential nomination. But, as a three-time party nominee with two additional attempts seeking his party's nomination, his announcement was received with skepticism. An old-fashioned record player, known as a Victrola, spreads his message. The Democrats nominated James M. Cox, Governor of Ohio, who lost the Presidential election to Republican Warren G. Harding.

*U.S. Senate Collection
Center for Legislative Archives*

From the Exhibit:
*Running for Office:
Candidates, Campaigns and the
Cartoons of Clifford K. Berryman*

The National Archives &
Records Administration
<http://www.archives.gov>

“William Jennings Bryan appears tired during the 13th day of the Democratic Convention at Madison Square Garden, 1924” (recent reprint)

By United Press International
Records of the U.S. Information Agency
National Archives

From the Exhibit:
*Running for Office:
Candidates, Campaigns and the
Cartoons of Clifford K. Berryman*

The National Archives &
Records Administration
<http://www.archives.gov>