LaToya Coleman

Executive Director, Enterprise Security
NISPPAC Industry Spokesperson

LaToya Coleman is a security and operations executive with more than 20 years of experience leading complex, highly regulated, classified, and Defense Industrial Base organizations. As Executive Director of Enterprise Security at Mantech International Corporation, she leads security operations spanning Industrial Security, Personnel Security, Physical Security, Policy and Governance, and Security Support.

LaToya is known for transforming complex requirements into practical operating models that strengthen accountability, operational consistency, risk management, and organizational performance. She partners with executive leadership and cross-functional organizations to align security, business, and customer priorities.

A recognized leader within the Defense Industrial Base, LaToya serves as an elected industry member and Spokesperson for the National Industrial Security Program Policy Advisory Committee (NISPPAC) and serves on the Board of Directors of the Industrial Security Working Group (ISWG). She regularly engages with government and industry leaders on issues affecting industrial security, operational resilience, regulatory compliance, and the evolving security needs of the defense community.

LaToya brings a practical, collaborative perspective to leadership, with a focus on building partnerships, creating shared accountability, and enabling organizations to achieve mission and business objectives while protecting the people, information, facilities, and capabilities entrusted to them.
