U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission
Chief, Security Management and Operations

Denis H. Brady

Since 2015, Mr. Brady serves as the Chief, Security Management and Operations Branch, Division of Facilities and Security, with overall responsibility for planning, developing, directing, and coordinating all policies and activities of the nationwide facilities security program for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC). Prior to his current appointment, Mr. Brady served as the program manager and nuclear security inspector supporting the NRC's force-on-force security inspection program.

In his current role, Mr. Brady oversees the NRC security program that provides for and assures the physical protection of NRC staff, classified information and activities, and government equipment and facilities to assure the continuity of activities. He formulates a wide variety of agency-wide operational security policies and techniques which involve buildings and grounds, fire, safety and security equipment and procedures, communications, guard services, access, technical security countermeasures, emergency planning, and coordination with local and Federal law enforcement agencies.

As the chief of the Security Management and Operations Branch, he develops policies, procedures and standards for physical security to safeguard National Security Information, Restricted Data and sensitive unclassified information in the possession of NRC, NRC contractors, and other personnel. Additionally, Mr. Brady acts as the authoritative NRC spokesperson on the implementation of physical security matters and coordinates with other government agencies concerning multi-agency security interests.

The NRC Insider Threat Program is directed and managed by him, and he serves as lead to the NRC's Travel Advisory Group. This group advises agency management of safety, security, and threat-related information in order to make a risk-informed decision for NRC staff planning for, or currently on official foreign and/or domestic travel.

Mr. Brady directs and manages the NRC Security Infractions/Inquiries Program involving NRC employees, contractors and licensees. He develops and implements systems and methods to preclude recurrences and assures such systems and methods are in conformance with acceptable administrative practices and procedures.

Prior to joining the NRC, Mr. Brady served in the U.S. Army as an investigator and later retired from the Army National Guard as an infantry officer. Mr. Brady was a regional vice president of a large, cleared security services firm and managed the industrial security program as its Facility Security Officer. Mr. Brady enjoys spending time with friends and family, cooking/grilling and has a passion for restoring classic cars from the 60's and 70's.
