- were punished at night. These punishments were, he states, “attended by the German civilians, as their nightly diversion.” In discussing Nazi cruelty he stated that “the German people were well aware of the system. They knew and until the last moment aided the Nazis. They were the accomplices either in direct help or moral aid. All the prisoners who attempted to escape were recaptured by the denunciation of German civilians. Crimes were committed before their eyes and caused no revulsion or interference” [WN#07596]

They are to be liquidated. General Stahel, the city commandant of Rome, will permit this action only if it is consistent with the politics of the Reich Foreign Minister. It would be better business, in my opinion, to use the Jews, as in Tunis, for work on fortifications. Together with Kappler, I shall present this view through Field Marshal General Kesselring.”] [WN#16457]
