"These studies are the remarkable fruit of a wholly unprecedented effort to locate, declassify, and analyze many thousands of World War II-related U.S. intelligence, military, law enforcement, and diplomatic files that remained classified decades beyond any legitimate need for secrecy. The studies make important contributions to our knowledge of the Holocaust and other ghastly Axis crimes. Some of the disclosures set forth in these pages, particularly those regarding the means by which perpetrators of Nazi crimes against humanity were able to evade justice and the extent of Allied government contemporaneous awareness of the Third Reich's genocidal plans, are both depressing and disturbing."

—Eli Rosenbaum, Director, Department of Justice,
Office of Special Investigations

U.S. Intelligence and the Nazis

"This report reveals startling new secrets about the U.S. government's... use of Nazi war criminals after WWII. It couldn't be more timely."

—Elizabeth Holtzman, former congresswoman from New York and IWG Public Member

"Here several established scholars who are knowledgeable in this special field demonstrate how the newly declassified records either alter our understanding of major events during and after World War II or add significant new information on aspects of the Holocaust and related issues that badly needed further clarification."

—Gerhard Weinberg, Professor Emeritus of History, University of North Carolina, and Chair of the IWG Historical Advisory Panel

"The historians involved...are all to be congratulated for meticulous scholarship and judicious assessments. There are new findings in abundance for scholars and readers interested in the Second World War, the Holocaust's perpetrators and collaborators, and the role of intelligence services....This book will do a great service by opening new lines of inquiry into the history of the Holocaust and by guiding researchers into the mass of new records now available."

—Wesley K. Wark, Professor, Department of History, University of Toronto, and Fellow, Munk Centre for International Studies, University of Toronto

U.S. Intelligence and the Nazis discusses hundreds of the 8 million-plus documents released under the Nazi War Crimes Disclosure Act by the CIA, FBI, NSA, Army, State Department, and other U.S. agencies. This book contains a great deal of new information about the world of intelligence, especially concerning the postwar use of war criminals by U.S. intelligence organizations. It also sheds new light on Holocaust issues, showing, for example, that the Allies had knowledge of the genocide earlier than historians previously believed. By using these newly released documents to refine what was previously understood about World War II, the Holocaust, and intelligence activities during and after the war, the authors demonstrate the historical, cultural, and moral importance of the declassified information.
