OGIS' FOIA regulations guidance does NOT advise "20-working days acknowledgement"

Dear agents of the United States, Referring to the OGIS' FOIA guidance in "Agency Best Practices: Agency FOIA Regulations" (see https://ogis.archives.gov/for-federal-agencies/agency-best-practices/agency-best-practices--agency-foia-regulations.htm), NOWHERE is it advised that a "20-working days acknowledgement" shall be promulgated as a FOIA regulation. Sincerely, Brady Eames
Dear agents of the United States, Missing from a webpage of the OGIS titled "Amended FOIA Portions" (see https://ogis.archives.gov/for-federal-agencies/amended-foia-portions.htm) are any reference to or citation of the critical 2007 FOIA amendments regarding (1) agency forfeiture of duplication fee charges if late in making an initial adjudication; (2) commencement of the 20-day adjudication statute of limitations; or (3) assignment of tracking numbers and providing status information with respect to initial adjudications. Under its statutory duties (see 5 USC 552(h), one would expect the OGIS to publish complete information with respect to such 2007 amendments. Sincerely, Brady Eames
Dear agents of the United States, Although mandated under the proactive disclosure subsection of the FOIA (see 5 USC 552(a)(2)), the publishing and availability of an index providing identifying information as to any matter issued, adopted or promulgated by a Federal agency after July 4, 1967 appears to NOT be deferred to or addressed by the OGIS or by the DOJ/OIP in their respective FOIA directives and guidance published on their respective websites "ogis.archives.gov" and "justice.gov/oip". Please explain. Thank you, Brady Eames
