Dear agents of the United States, Established within DOJ's "Office of Information Policy" (OIP) is a "Freedom of Information Committee" (FOIC) that is accountable for "expertise dealing with the many complex issues that arise under the Act" and providing "specific advice" to an Executive agency regarding "relevant legal and policy issues". However, when one refers to the separate statements of the organization and functions of the OIP codified under 28 CFR .24, the FOIC is not even acknowledged or stated as a component of the OIP that is responsible for such critical FOIA adjudications. Please explain the concealment of the organization and functions of the FOIC. Thank you, Brady Eames
