Introduction

The National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) is our national record keeper. An executive agency created by statute in 1934, NARA safeguards records of all three branches of the Federal Government. NARA’s mission is to ensure that Federal officials and the American public have continuing access to essential documentation—records that document the rights of citizens, the actions of Government officials, and the national experience. The agency meets a wide range of information needs, among them helping people to trace their families’ histories and enabling veterans to prove their entitlement to medical and other benefits. NARA carries out its mission through a nationwide network of archives, records centers, and Presidential libraries, and on the Internet at www.archives.gov.

NARA also establishes policies and procedures for managing and transferring U.S. Government records, and assisting Federal agencies in documenting their activities and administering records management programs. It assists the Information Security Oversight Office, which manages Federal classification and declassification policies, and the National Historical Publications and Records Commission, which makes grants nationwide to help nonprofit organizations identify, preserve, and provide access to materials that document American history.

NARA's publications program dates from 1941, when the agency's custodial units were first instructed to prepare inventories and other finding aids to help researchers locate specific records within its vast holdings. With billions of textual documents; over 5 million maps, charts, and architectural drawings; more than 16 million still photographs, 16 million aerial photographs, 92,000 reels of motion picture film, and 260,000 videotapes and sound recordings; 404,000 artifacts; and over 8 billion electronic records, preserved by NARA along with well-known documents such as the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, these published finding aids are more useful than ever before.

PUBLICATIONS IN THIS LIST

The range and quantity of National Archives publications has expanded greatly in recent years. This increase is due largely to the agency's ever-progressing use of the World Wide Web as a publishing medium. Other factors include:

- Changing formats—While some publications have been revised and reprinted, others have been reissued in both print and online digital formats and others online only.
- Expanded records holdings and agency programs—The opening of more Nixon Presidential materials, increased declassification of records, accession of electronic records, expansion of regional archives facilities, growing emphasis on exhibitions and educational programs, and other agency initiatives have necessitated the development of new publications or revision of existing ones. NARA's Washington, DC, area facilities, the regional archives, and Presidential libraries have added substantially to their offerings of online guides to records and programs.

- Technical advances—These have enabled and required the expansion of our web site, www.archives.gov, and other NARA web sites; the production of searchable records inventories and databases; and the publication of specialized guides, such as electronic records management materials.
- Online store—The National Archives Trust Fund's online store at www.estore.archives.gov has expanded sales and demand for many publications.
- Foundation for the National Archives—The Foundation has sponsored and produced numerous new publications showcasing the agency's records and exhibitions.
- Partnerships—Several new partnerships with the private sector have resulted in new products, especially ones that feature NARA's multimedia records.

This revised edition includes NARA publications produced either in print, online, or in multimedia format, or any combination of these. While most out-of-print publications are not included, those of continuing research value, such as select Inventories, have been retained. This is a select list, identifying the most prominent, requested, and used publications.

The materials listed here are generally arranged by type and category, except for sections arranged by Presidential library or regional archive. Notations indicate their format, for example "print," "print, online," "electronic," and page count. Brief introductions to each section provide the correct web site for viewing online publications. Citations of fee publications include price and product number, and they can be purchased at www.estore.archives.gov, unless otherwise noted.

FINDING AIDS ON MICROFILM

Some of the older printed finding aids listed in this pamphlet may be in short supply—if not out of print—but are still useful. NARA filmed many of them up to the year 2001 in National Archives Microfilm Publication M248, Publications of the National Archives, 1935– . This 52-roll series is thus a valuable resource for many of those guides to records that are listed in the body of this publication but that are out of print or not online.

The publications in M248 were filmed and added to that series in stages: for the years 1936–56, in 1957 (rolls 1–8); 1957–66, in January 1967 (rolls 9–19); 1966–68, in 1970 (rolls 20–24); and for 1968–2001, in the period 1970–2001 (rolls 25–52). The rolls contain a wide variety of publications that are historically interesting for their documentation of the agency’s development, including annual reports, agency bulletins and regulations, records administration circulars, and conference proceedings. However, the rolls also contain facsimile reproductions of the following finding aids that remain valuable for current research:

| Reference Information Papers | Numbers 1–108, with gaps |
| Inventories | Numbers 1–17 |
| Preliminary Inventories | Numbers 1–195 |
| Special Lists | Numbers 1–56 |
| Guides to German Records | Numbers 1–85 |
| Microfilmed at Alexandria, VA | |

More information about the contents of microfilm publication M248 can be found through the Order Online microfilm locator at www.archives.gov, and rolls can be purchased there as well. Note: Some listings in these finding aids have been updated over the years, and their record series information is being systematically entered into the Archival Research Catalog (ARC) at www.archives.gov.

MICROFILM PUBLICATIONS

The National Archives and Records Administration reproduces and publishes part of its archival holdings in microfilm publications, often with an accompanying descriptive pamphlet. Those publications are not listed here. To search for National Archives microfilm series by topic, and for descriptions of their contents, visit the Order Online web page at www.archives.gov. Consult the online roll list or table of contents for the series before ordering specific rolls. Microfilm can be purchased for $85 per roll or $125 per CD in digital format (prices subject to change) either online at <https://eservices.archives.gov/orderonline> or from National Archives Trust Fund, Cashier (NAT), Form 72 Order, 8601 Adelphi Road, College Park, MD 20740-6001. Provide specific roll number(s). Make checks payable to the National Archives Trust Fund. VISA, MasterCard, Discover, and American Express are also accepted. Provide the account number, expiration date, and cardholder signature.

OTHER ONLINE RESOURCES

This select list of publications identifies NARA's most important and requested publications. There are numerous other online resources and databases that are either not structured as a publication or are more specific in focus, but that can be found on the agency's web site at www.archives.gov and on the web sites of the Presidential libraries and regional archives.

National Archives Web Site

The agency's web site at www.archives.gov has many online resources, but several particularly valuable ones are mentioned here.

Archival Research Catalog (ARC) allows researchers to search for record collections in the Washington, DC, area, the regional archives, and the Presidential libraries by keyword or topic. This resource includes descriptions of textual records, still and motion pictures, data sets, and artifacts. In early 2010, over 68 percent of the agency's records were described at the series level in ARC, and more listings are added each week.

Access to Archival Databases (AAD) is a searchable collection of databases on topics ranging from wars and international relations to military personnel records, passenger lists, and cities and towns. Searches yield databases with summarized information or locate specific series and documents.

The Order Online microfilm locator allows researchers to perform keyword searches of the general content of the agency's thousands of microfilm publications, compile lists of relevant series, and then order film.

The Archives Library Information Center (ALIC) provides access to information on American history and government, archival administration, information management, and Government documents for NARA staff, archives and records management professionals, and the general public.

eVetRecs is an online service for requesting copies of one's own military personnel record or that of a relative. (The Order Online system noted above allows ordering of pre-World War I military service records.)

Regional Archives and Presidential Libraries

The regional archives and Presidential libraries have developed and posted numerous finding aids, guides, educational materials, and informational leaflets that pertain to their records and programs. These include records inventories, box lists, lists and transcripts of oral histories, databases, workshop materials, brochures, and other guides. Researchers can access the libraries' and regional archives' web sites through NARA's main site at www.archives.gov or find the particular facility's web address in the appendix to this publication.

Please send any corrections or recommended additions to this publication to Product Development Staff, NWCD, National Archives and Records Administration, 700 Pennsylvania Avenue NW, Room 400, Washington, DC 20408.

MICROFILM CATALOGS

A microfilm catalog describes National Archives microfilm publications related to subjects of high research interest. It often contains detailed descriptions of the records and roll-by-roll listings for each publication.

Print: These catalogs can be purchased online at www.estimate.archives.gov.

Online: See www.archives.gov/publications. Not all of these catalogs are reproduced online with the original print formatting; those that are not provide links to a database, the “Order Online” microfilm locator at www.archives.gov, that allows searches by keyword or subject, review of roll lists and introductory material, and ordering.

INVENTORIES, PRELIMINARY INVENTORIES, AND SPECIAL LISTS

Inventories and preliminary inventories provide researchers with series-level descriptions of the holdings of individual record groups in the National Archives. Each inventory and preliminary inventory also contains an administrative history of the agency that accumulated the records described. Special lists describe in detail the contents of certain important record series or units of records of the same form or function. The special list presents information at the level of individual record items. Note: The record series described in these publications are being regularly entered into the Archival Research Catalog (ARC) at www.archives.gov.

REGIONAL ARCHIVES

Publications (print and digital) produced by NARA's regional archives are listed below along with each region's URL, or web address. These titles are primarily guides to records and other records-related materials. Formats ("print" or "online") are indicated. See the appendix for a list of the regional archives with full contact information. Many of these online guides are also listed collectively by location on the NARA web site at www.archives.gov/locations/finding-aids. Fee ($) publications are available, where listed, from the online shop of the regional archive. Note: The regional archives also have numerous, more focused finding aids not listed here, such as box lists, inventories, and databases, and other informational materials. The Archival Research Catalog (ARC) at www.archives.gov is also invaluable for identifying records at the regional archives.

PRESIDENTIAL LIBRARIES

The Presidential libraries provide many formal guides to records on their web sites, with the most important ones listed below. Additional resources, including databases, series descriptions, and reference guides to still picture and audiovisual collections, are also available on their web sites. Books that document or explain the libraries' unique historical materials or programs are listed here with prices, and they are available through each library's online museum or gift store. The online stores offer many additional titles of general interest.

Many series of textual records, audiovisual records, and still pictures at the libraries can be identified through NARA's Archival Research Catalog (ARC) database at www.archives.gov. A full listing of all library addresses and contact information is in the appendix.
