   Cooperative fire protection is a function of the Forest Service authorized under the Cooperative Forestry Assistance Act of 1978. The Forest Service provides financial, technical and other assistance to State Foresters to help them achieve efficiency in fire protection on their nonfederal wildlands and other rural lands.

   To accomplish this objective, the Cooperative Fire Protection Staff administers programs which provide leadership, technical assistance and participates in activities to help States meet cooperative fire protection objectives. Three are: (1) Wildland Fire Protection, (2) Rural Community Fire Protection, and (3) Federal Excess Personal Property Program.

   A fourth program, The Smokey Bear Program is the most popular and widely known program of Cooperative Fire Protection. This is a joint Federal-State-private effort to prevent human-caused wildland fires. The original artwork and other audio-visual products from the Smokey Bear Program are scheduled under the 1640 series of the filing system.

   No previous schedule exist for any of the records considered in this job.

   All changes to this proposed schedule have been approved by:
