STAT-USA

10. STAT-USA/Internet Database

STAT-USA/Internet is the Federal government's premier electronic publisher of trade and economic information, which is available through subscription on its website www.stat-usa.gov. The database consists of reports, statements, press releases, and statistics from all Federal agencies that collect, produce, or release trade, manufacturing, or other economic data. STAT-USA does not create any of the data or manipulate the data received from other agencies. Participating agencies include the Federal Reserve Board, State Department, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Census Bureau, International Trade Administration, and Departments of Treasury, Housing, Labor, and Defense.

The website is divided into two segments: GLOBUS & NTDB and State of the Nation. STAT-USA has partnered with the Census Bureau to provide a second web data service, USA Trade Online, www.usatradeonline.gov. The National Trade Data Bank (NTDB) was the original module around which STAT-USA was developed. It includes market and country research reports, export data, CIA international trade statistics, currency exchange rates, and current and historical trade leads. NTDB is an outgrowth of the Economic Bulletin Board, a telephone dial-in service that was established in 1985 by the Office of Business Analysis (OBA), the predecessor to STAT-USA. The Omnibus Trade Act of 1988 required that DOC serve as a central clearinghouse for Federal government trade information, and OBA was tasked to develop the NTDB. The original means of dissemination of NTDB data was CD-ROM disks. The GLOBUS component consists of current global business opportunity leads from the Commerce Business Daily and other sources that are updated daily.

The State of the Nation segment consists of general economic indicators; data and reports regarding employment, housing, and manufacturing and industry; monetary statistics; and minutes, statement, and testimony relating to economic policy.

USA Trade Online, which is also available on CD-ROM disks as USA Trade, is a detailed companion to the NTDB. It contains monthly exports and imports data on more than 17,000 commodities that is provided by the Foreign Trade Division at the Bureau of the Census. Data fields include harmonized system product codes, country and district current and previous month quantity and value data, and four-year annual history by country, quantity, and value.
