OFFICE OF JAPAN

The Office of Japan develops and coordinates policy guidance and program recommendations for trade policy and trade promotion activities in this geographical area. Responsibilities include the performance of promotional, analytical, and/or advisory work relating to international trade policies, competitive economic relationships, trade practices, trade restrictions and controls, problems faced by U.S. exporters and manufacturers in competing in Japan, and related programs of other public and private organizations. The Office of Japan is the principal advisor to the Under Secretary for International Trade on trade policy and trade promotion matters regarding Japan. The Office of Japan is divided into two units: Trade Promotion and Policy.

Trade Promotion Staff
