1510-05 Capital Construction files. Includes applications, reports, and related documents on aid given to vessel owners under the capital construction program.

Recommended disposition:

1. Paper records: Destroy 1 year after termination of aid (assuming microfilm copies have been made and verified).
2. Microfilm copies, or paper records which have not been microfilmed : Destroy 6 years after termination of aid.

Explanation: This program allows participants to set up an account where funds can be deposited on a tax-deferred basis, much like an Individual Retirement Account. The funds in the account can then only be used for vessel construction. The six year retention is necessary because of the possibility of tax fraud, and the IRS reviews are based on the six years.

*1510-12 Construction Differential Subsidy Program Case files. Applications, agreements, and related documents pertaining to subsidies given to promote the U.S. construction of fishing vessels under this program.

Recommended disposition: Cut off when case is closed. Destroy 15 years later.

Explanation: This program is inactive, with the last case approved in 1971. It sought to keep fishermen from getting vessels built outside the U.S. by paying the difference in construction costs between the foreign and U.S. builders. In return for this payment, the fisherman had to agree to certain limitations for a 15 year period. These limitations usually dealt with the species that could be fished for, and the use of U.S. personnel on the vessel. The 15 year retention is based on this period of restrictions.

*This is a new code being added to the NOAA Filing-Disposition Handbook.
