1	ADMINISTRATIVE ORDERS (Table 10-3) (Applicable Air Force-wide) Rule 2.1. Changed the description by adding "EXCEPT D-series and J-series reserve orders." These orders are now covered for disposition in added Rule 2.2.	N1-AFU-90-35
2	Rule 2.2. Added, to dispose of original or record copies of D-series and J-series reserve orders. The seven years disposition is sufficient since (a) the record copies of the D-series and J-series orders are never used as a source document for pay and point purposes, (b) publication of these orders is not sufficient justification that duty was actually performed, and (c) the Defense Finance and Accounting Service (DFAS) and Point Credit Branch at Air Force Reserve Personnel Center (ARPC) use the D-series and J-series orders only as an indicator that duty was authorized and could have been performed. The only true verification of the actual number of days performed is the certified copy of the D-series and J-series reserve orders. Per AFR 4-20, Volume 2, Table 177-25, Rule 9 ((Air Reserve Pay and Allowance System

	(ARPAS) supporting documents), these certified orders are maintained separately from the record copies and are destroyed after 6 years, 3 months. Our proposed 7 years retention is in line with the Barring Act (Statute of Limitations, 31 USC 3702). This Act allows members a six year period after a claim first accrues to present it to the GAO. Our recommended retention is one year longer than the statute of limitation and will afford protection to the member as well as the USAF.
