For the intelligence community, the Director of Central Intelligence is the authority for the intelligence data access program. Access to intelligence data not only requires a security clearance, if the intelligence data is classified, but also a special access clearance called Sensitive Compartmented Information. The sensitive nature of this intelligence information and the dangers to the security of the nation if improperly released compelled the adoption of a security system which will insure the strictest safeguarding of SCI. One of the system's requirements is to require persons gaining access to SCI intelligence data to sign a Nondisclosure Agreement.	GRS 18, Item 26 (deviation)	1 item

	This Nda requires that each person indoctrinated for SCI submit anything that might relate to SCI for security review prior to its disclosure to the public, as long as that person lives. To hold personnel accountable to this agreement, the Nda must be held as long as its signer is physically capable of violating it. This retention period is 70 years, which is believed would cover the reasonable life expectancy of the population involved. Attached Under Secretary of Defense Memorandum for the Director, Defense Intelligence Agency explains further the need and use of the SCI Nda. Policy requirements for the SCI Nda will be included in appropriate DOD and Air Force directives.
