EXPLANATORY NOTES

1) Criteria for selecting drawings of historical or architectural significance:

- Were created prior to 1921.
- Document major U.S. Army activities relating to its involvement in the former Panama Canal Zone or the Republic of Panama.
EXAMPLE: Canal defenses and fortifications, batteries.
- Depict long-lasting and historically significant buildings (i.e., buildings that were intended to endure for many years and are critical to the mission of the Department of the Army).
EXAMPLES: Large administrative buildings, such as Bldg. 95, Fort Clayton; Sector Hospitals, such as Bldg. 519, Fort Clayton; clubhouses, such as Club Amador, Fort Amador.

- Reflect a specified architectural style, or are related to buildings that illustrate the characteristics of either a given period, or an international or regional architectural style. EXAMPLES: Balboa Elementary School (Italianate Renaissance Style) and Bldg. 39, Fort Clayton (Bellavistino Style).
- Reflect a uniform building type easily identified throughout the Panama Canal area, and permanent facilities for community and military installations incorporating the open-air design initiated during the French Canal Construction Era, and which include generously screened porches and an abundance of windows. EXAMPLE: Quarters 1-23, Quarry Heights.
- Reflect a standard or typical design, or an original used as a basis for similar buildings. EXAMPLES: Office buildings, barracks buildings, NCO Bachelor Quarters.
- Show unique innovations or were prototypes (i.e., buildings that were the first of their kind, experimental housing or community projects established as prototypes or models).
- Are associated with national or international events or personalities of historic significance. EXAMPLE: Any drawing which contains an original signature of George W. Goethals.
- Are associated with buildings which were designed by noted architects, engineers or scientists.
- Depict buildings which were associated with public or political controversy. EXAMPLE: Balboa High School.
- Are of buildings which have been identified as significant by the Republic of Panama's Instituto Nacional de Cultura or by the United States' Department of the Interior, or which have been recommended for Historic American Building Survey, or documentation by Mobile District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in its 1995 publication "Historic Resources Assessments, Department of Defense Activities, Panama."

- Are general site plans or layouts for installations, <sup>or underground</sup> ~~exclusive of utilities maps (i.e., electrical, plumbing, sewer, water, mechanical, etcetera).~~ However, closest available site plan is desirable for each installation.

- utility diagrams showing the location of subsurface electrical, water & sewer lines.*
- 2) Duplicate, nonrecord, GRS, or records lacking sufficient historical value will be removed and destroyed during archival processing.
  - 3) Those drawings assigned a temporary disposition but considered necessary for continued operations may be transferred to the Republic of Panama when legal custody of the structure itself is transferred.
