<td>READINESS REPORTING FILES (FN 209-03, AR 340-18-2). Documents relating to the reporting of actual readiness conditions of Army forces. Included are individual and consolidated unit readiness reports, reviews and evaluation of readiness, commanders situation reports, personnel status reports, logistic readiness reports, papers concerning the actual readiness conditions of Army forces, and related documents. Disposition: Office performing Army-wide responsibility: Permanent. Offer to the National Archives after 25 years. Other offices: Destroy after 2 years. Hold in CFR 2 yrs. then return to Records Center. Request authority to establish disposition instructions as described above for readiness reporting files. A re-evaluation of these records revealed that the 2 year retention period approved in 1962 and the description of the records at that time was in error; 2 years have proven to be totally unacceptable. The files were described, at that time, as pertaining to reserve units only, while in actuality they are the record copies of documents that depict the state of readiness of all US Army forces. They are considered extremely valuable for reference, research, and historical purposes, and it is imperative that they be designated as permanent documents. Current volume on hand is 1 linear foot and these records accumulate at a rate of 1/4 linear foot each year. Records filed chronologically by dates.</td>
