	[Explanatory Note: The NIH Division of Management Survey and Review conducts surveys and reviews of management control systems to determine if such systems conform to the requirements of Federal laws, regulations, directives, policies and guidelines or appraise the adequacy or soundness of such systems. DMSR reviews management controls within NIH and also in other organizations receiving Federal funds through grants, contracts or cooperative agreements. DMSR conducts such reviews at the request of NIH management or in response to allegations of impropriety or wrongdoing. DMSR also performs investigations of alleged impropriety or wrongdoing by NIH employees, individuals within organizations receiving funds from NIH, or by organizations or individuals subject to regulations or guidelines issued by NIH (e.g. the regulations on the protection of research subjects or the guidelines on recombinant DNA research). If an allegation is so vague that it is unclear if the alleged violation is criminal in nature, DMSR conducts preliminary investigations to determine if a criminal violation may be involved. Alleged violations which are clearly criminal in nature are referred to the Office of the Inspector General (OIG), DHHS. However, OIG may return cases to DMSR for administrative action when it determines that there is insufficient grounds for prosecution. DMSR conducts independent investigations of alleged violations which are not criminal in nature. The Division may also collaborate or assist in investigations of scientific misconduct (e.g. falsification of data) when requested to do so by responsible officials of NIH.
