1. INPUTS

The EID is supported by front-textual data capture tool modules that include records from the following systems:

- Enforcement Case Tracking System (ENFORCE)

ENFORCE deals with the collection of data associated with arrest bookings. Data collected electronically through this module feeds the EID and is later used by other ENFORCE components. It is the primary means of inputting and extracting data for the Border Patrol. It automates the booking and business processes, thereby providing more consistent statistics and workload measurements.

- Automated Biometric Identification System (IDENT)

IDENT allows agents to capture and make a fingerprint identification of individuals during processing without exiting ENFORCE. In addition to capturing fingerprint data, IDENT has the capability to capture and store facial photographs and a Fingerprint Identification Number (FIN) of the subject. The individual's descriptive and demographic information is collected by ENFORCE and stored in the EID database.

- Enforcement Removal Module (EREM)

The EREM replaces the Deportable Alien Control System. The EREM is an automated tracking system used to support casework activities associated with individuals who are detained or placed under docket control for deportation, exclusion, or removal. It provides management with information concerning the status and/or disposition of individual cases, as well as, statistical and summary data of cases by type and status.

- National Security Entry Exit Registration System (NSEERS)

NSEERS is an electronic system used at BICE to track nonimmigrants from certain countries that enter the United States every year. These individuals are required to register in person with the BICE. The system allows the government to review data that will assist in locating individuals holding nonimmigrant visas; review data to assist in determining if certain individuals holding nonimmigrant visas have overstayed their visas. Data from NSEERS that is stored in the EID database is entered electronically while the individual is present.
