Background Information

The CAP Tracker functions as a case management application and correspondence generator for rejected H-1B Form I-129 petitions. The H-1B classification allows U.S. employers to temporarily employ foreign workers in the United States in specialty occupations. In order to obtain authorization to employ a foreign worker as an H-1B, the importing employer (or agent) files the Form I-129, Petition for Non-Immigrant Worker.

The H-1B classification is generally subject to an annual numerical limit (commonly referred to as the "H-1B cap"). H-1B petitions subject to the annual cap may be filed up to six months before the date of intended employment. Since the annual cap is based on the fiscal year, which starts on October 1 of each year, cap-subject petitions may be filed as early as April 1. Given significant demand for H-1B visas, the H-1B cap is now typically reached during the first week of cap filings. When the number of cap-subject petitions exceeds the number of annual H-1B visas during the first 5 days of filing, a lottery is conducted pursuant to the regulations to select petitions in the annual cap. Those cap-subject petitions that are not selected are rejected and returned to the petitioner. The CAP Tracker tracks I-129 petitions that are rejected after the H-1B cap has been reached.

Cap-subject H-1B petitions that are properly filed and selected under the H-1B lottery (when applicable) are entered into CLAIMS 3. Cap-subject H-1B petitions that are not selected in the H-1B cap and rejected are not entered into CLAIMS 3.

The CAP Tracker serves as a centralized database that provides well-defined data that can be used to determine volume and trends of rejects that are issued. CAP Tracker data is used to:

- improve internal processes;

- improve communication with customers;
- enhance electronic documentation in the event of litigation; and
- standardize the response language in reject letters.

NOTE: Records that are linked to national security, law enforcement, fraud, administrative investigations or actions, congressional inquiries or similar matters may be extended beyond the applicable retention period in five-year increments.
