1.	MACHINE-READABLE FILES OF ANTITRUST DIVISION Antitrust Caseload Evaluation System (ACES) The Antitrust Caseload Evaluation System (ACES) is a management information system used primarily to monitor antitrust activities of the Antitrust Division through caseload reporting. It is also capable of providing manpower and cost and budget data for resource allocation and budget analysis. ACES provides for useful on-line and batch information retrieval, and routine and ad hoc summaries for Division management. ACES consists of a number of interrelated major data bases--the Matters and Time Allocation data bases are updated monthly and weekly from revised section and field office monthly reports and individual professional time sheets. The cost data base is updated monthly from financial and budget data compiled using the Department's Financial Management Information System (FMIS). The matters data base contains data on antitrust matters from 1983 to the present. The professional time allocation data base contains employee time from		3 items

	October 1975 to the present. Information contained in ACES is identified as follows: Matter type/phase, Section identifications, Violation descriptions, Standard Industry Codes (SIC), Geographic designations, Court locations, Status descriptions, Staff personnel, Relief categories, Titles of matters, DOJ file numbers, Authorization dates, Product descriptions, Dollar volume of commerce, Judge's names, Civil numbers, Criminal numbers, Blue Book numbers, Parties involved, and other information for internal uses. Additional data bases linked to ACES cover personnel information. Data for the ACES system are generated from internal Division sources. Information content includes key items for individual antitrust and regulatory matters, such as type of matter, violation description, standard industry codes, status of matters and titles, activity, and professional staff. Other economic and descriptive information is also identified with the matters. Data input is generated by the section handling the individual matter. Weekly time reports are generated by individual professionals in each section. The system produces Division, section and field office monthly activity reports, individual professional staff time allocation sheets, a monthly product summary report and monthly and annual management reports. DATE OF FILE: 1975 to present.
