Sensitive Source Reporting Program (SSRP) Print-Outs

The Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) maintains over 48 linear feet of hard copy print-outs from the Sensitive Source Reporting Program (SSRP) For many years, the FBI downloaded information from the Central Intelligence Agency’s SSRP electronic system and created paper reference files to store the outputs However, in 2009, the FBI implemented a new business process whereby employees query the SSRP and only print those reports related to a matter in which the FBI has an investigative or intelligence interest Employees rarely refer to the collection of pre-2009 printed reports

The FBI may use portions of the SSRP documents to create a new FBI document, however, the original SSRP document is not placed in file nor is it uploaded into the Automated Case Support system

Disposition: Temporary Destroy pre-2009 collection of paper files immediately upon approval of this schedule
