Background Information

The United States Marshals Service (USMS) is the nation's oldest and most versatile federal law enforcement agency and was established under the Judiciary Act of 1789. The various missions of the USMS include: the protection of the federal judiciary and all other participants in the federal judicial process, the execution of federal arrest warrants, the service of civil and criminal process, the transportation and production of prisoners for court, the administration of the seized assets program, and any other duties as ordered by the Attorney General as codified by 28 U.S.C. § 566 and 28 C.F.R. § 0.111. The USMS has 94 districts spanning the continent and beyond, with tens of thousands of federal judges, prosecutors, jurors, witnesses, and defendants involved in the judicial process. The records disposition instructions are media neutral, unless otherwise stated.
