Included are gifts given to the President, the Vice President, their spouses and immediate families, and high level staff, artifact materials generated and/or used during the President's term in the White House (e.g., lecterns, holiday decorations), and private donations given by the President, the President's family and associates, and the general public. The AMCMD also documents some "courtesy storage" materials (in NARA's physical custody under terms of deposit agreements) and materials on loan to a Presidential library for exhibit purposes. Artifact materials documented in the Presidential Materials Staff's AMCMD include gifts in the legal custody of the incumbent President's administration and placed on courtesy storage for deposit with the President's future library. Upon conclusion of the President's final term of office, these holdings and their associated records are transferred to NARA's legal custody, and moved to a temporary facility and eventually to the new Presidential library. The Presidential Materials Staff's AMCMD also documents former Vice Presidents' gifts in NARA's legal custody which are managed by the Presidential Materials Staff.• Museum items in the AMCMD come into NARA's legal and physical custody through the following ways• Items are received by the Archivist and deposited in the Presidential Libraries under 44 U.S.C. §2101, 2111, and 2112 (including under the terms of Presidents' and other donors' deeds of gift)• Transfers of historical materials of President Richard M.
