Background Information

The U.S. Nuclear Waste Technical Review Board was established in the 1987 Nuclear Waste Policy Amendments Act (NWPAA) (P.L. 100-203) to evaluate the technical and scientific validity of activities related to managing and disposing of spent nuclear fuel and high-level radioactive waste. The agency has developed an Information systems called the Nuclear Waste Assessment System for Technical Evaluation (NUWASTE). The Board intends to use NUWASTE to support its ongoing technical evaluation of U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) activities related to the management of spent nuclear fuel (SNF) and high-level radioactive waste¹ (HLW). Initial analyses performed using NUWASTE have demonstrated its value in gaining a better understanding of the effects of potential fuel-cycle initiatives on the generation of SNF, HLW, and other waste streams. A particularly important feature of NUWASTE is its ability to compare results for a range of scenarios and quantify the relative impacts on the program for managing SNF and HLW in the United States.
