The National Advisory Council on the Public Service is a bi-partisan Council established by PL 101-363, which was signed by President Bush on August 14, 1990. The Council is composed of 15 members: two members of the U.S. Senate, two members of the U.S. House of Representatives, the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, ten individuals appointed by the President (four officers serving in the executive branch, one federal career employee, one federal employee who is a member of a labor organization and four members of the public who do not hold a government office or position).

The Council’s mandate is to regularly assess the state of the Federal workforce and will: seek to attract individuals of the highest caliber to national public service; promote a better understanding of the role of federal employees in implementing government programs and policies; work to improve the public perception of federal employees; encourage efforts to build student interest in public service; develop methods for improving motivation and encouraging excellence within the federal workforce.

The Council was to be in existence for three years after the date the Council first met which was in June of 1992—the Council was to transmit to the President and each House of the Congress—(1) within one and two years, respectively, after the date on which the Council first meets, reports containing its preliminary findings and recommendations; and within three years submit a final report containing a detailed statement of the findings and conclusions of the Council, together with its recommendations for such legislation or administrative actions as it considers appropriate. However, the Council was terminated at the end of Fiscal Year 1993 by Executive Order 12838 submitting a first year and final report.
