New Management System (NMS)

The United States Agency for International Development (USAID)'s NMS is a comprehensive set of computer systems that are linked and attempt to capture all data necessary to manage USAID's business at the original source. The system includes data necessary to manage USAID's activities, such as data required to initiate, award and manage procurement actions, budget information and all accounting data. Implemented February 1, 1997, New Management System (NMS) is an Acquisition and Assistance System (NMS/A&A) used by the Agency as an electronic acquisition system data base. Data is stored on servers in Ronald Reagan Building, Washington, D.C. It is used to create requests for acquisition, assistance and interagency agreement awards and modifications, generate various documents required during the procurement process. The New Management System (NMS) records awards, receipts, and acceptance of deliverables. Data is input by NMS users to support Acquisition and Assistance requirements. NMS is interfaced with agency Financial Management System - Phoenix.

Disposition: Cut off annually. Destroy/delete when 5 years old or when no longer needed, whichever is later.
