Description:

The Compliance Activity Tracking System (CATS) is a program used to track routine, for cause, and secondary inspections on the state level; track data pertinent to case development; and generate report forms such as the 5700-33H. The states may enter and keep track of all inspections made, samples taken, cases developed and enforcement actions imposed. All data can be stored and reviewed at the user's discretion. The state agencies are able to send all data pertaining to their inspections, as well as apply to the region for federal grants. Through CATS the states can reference inspections made in other states that may pertain to inspections in their own. In addition, each state has a state-specific database, unique to each state, which can be used to track compliance and enforcement actions not covered by the cooperative agreement. A cumulative master database of information, including site name, product name, action type, inspection type, product name, active ingredients, and responsible parties for cases in all states is kept in the regional system.
