Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands (Freedmen's Bureau) for Arkansas, 1865–1872

Congress established the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands (Freedmen's Bureau) on March 3, 1865. Maj. Gen. Oliver O. Howard served as the only Commissioner of the Bureau. Part of the War Department, the Bureau managed all matters relating to refugees, freedmen, and lands abandoned or seized by Federal authorities during the Civil War. Providing relief and assistance to freedmen, the Bureau issued rations and clothing, operated hospitals and refugee camps, and supervised labor contracts. It also managed apprenticeship disputes, assisted in the establishment of schools, helped former slaves legalize their marriages, and provided transportation to refugees and freedmen. The Freedmen's Bureau was headquartered in Washington, DC, with field offices located in the former Confederate states, the Border States, and the District of Columbia. The Freedmen's Bureau operated until June 30, 1872, although most of its work concluded by December 1868. After 1872, the Bureau's records and activities were transferred to the Freedmen's Branch, Office of the Adjutant General, in Washington, DC.

In Arkansas, nine million acres of public land was available for settlement. The Bureau in Arkansas hired an agent to locate land for the freedmen, although much of the land was unsuitable for settlement. Only 25 percent of the approximately 250 freedmen (many from Georgia) who applied for land entries received land. The majority of Arkansas land entries were made by whites. The Bureau in Arkansas was also concerned about fair labor contracts between freedmen and planters. Subordinate Bureau officers kept records of the labor contracts that they approved and witnessed. Bureau officials advised freedmen to consider employment from individuals who offered educational opportunities to children.
