police on train platform did nothing to subdue rioters. Neues Deutsch-land also reported that S-Bahn train attendants had been prevented by rioters from carrying out their duties, and that the health and safety of thousands of West Berliners had been seriously endangered. Article concluded that "thanks only to the prudent measures of the Bahnpolizei of the Deutsche Reichsbahn could S-Bahn traffic be maintained."

Comment: East Germans never lose an opportunity to point up damage to S-Bahns in West Berlin and, by implication, inability of West Berlin authorities to protect railroad properties and equipment.
