(Record Group 208)

A Revision by Forrest R. Holdcamper
of
Preliminary Inventory No. 56

Compiled by H. Stephen Helton and Others

March 1967

REVISED AND UPDATED JUNE 2018

This inventory has been prepared in this form by the Diplomatic, Legal, and Fiscal Records Division in order to make it readily available for staff use. It has not been distributed as a National Archives publication.
NOTE

The 2018 version of the preliminary inventory is updated to reflect (1) the deletion of entries for records destroyed as not warranting continued preservation in the National Archives, (2) the removal of entries for audio-visual records now in the custody of the special media branches, (3) the inclusion of descriptions of series of records accessioned into the National Archives since preparation of the original preliminary inventory in 1967, and (4) the existence of records in other record groups.

Within the preliminary inventory, the position for one or more new entries is indicated by a note in the right margin at the point the entry belongs.

INTRODUCTION

The Office of War Information (OWI) was established by an Executive order of June 13, 1942, "in recognition of the right of the American people and of all other peoples opposing the Axis oppressors to be truthfully informed about the common war effort." To achieve a coordinated governmental war information program, both foreign and domestic, the functions and records of the Office of Facts and Figures and of the Office of Government Reports and the coordinating functions of the Division of Information in the Office for Emergency Management were transferred to the OWI. The Foreign Intelligence Service, Outpost, Publication, and Pictorial Branches of the Office of the Coordinator of Information were also transferred to the OWI. The Executive order provided, however, that dissemination of information to the Latin American countries should be continued by the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

The OWI carried out its information program through the press, radio, motion pictures, and other media. It coordinated the informational activities of other Government agencies and issued the directives necessary to ensure an accurate and consistent flow of information from the Government to the public. It reviewed and approved all proposed radio and motion picture programs to be sponsored by the Federal Government. It maintained liaison with the information agencies of other nations. It collaborated with the Office of Censorship to facilitate the prompt and full dissemination of all information that would not aid the enemy. It cooperated with the Board of War Communications in broadcasting war information abroad.

Foreign propaganda activities were at first divided between the Office of Strategic Services and the Office of War Information—with the field of the latter limited to open, as contrasted to secret, activities. Since this division of responsibility led to controversy, an Executive order of March 9, 1943, directed the OWI to carry on all activities related to United States propaganda abroad, except in Latin America.

The OWI was terminated, effective September 15, 1945, by an Executive order of August 31, 1945. The Overseas Operations Branch (including its executive and security offices in New York and San Francisco), the Office of the Assistant Director for Management, and the Office of General Counsel were transferred with their records immediately to the Interim International Information Service of the Department of State, which was established by the same Executive order. On January 1, 1946, these units became part of the Office of International Information and Cultural Affairs of the State Department. The Bureau of Special Services was transferred with its records from the Domestic Operations Branch to the Bureau of the Budget. Functions and records of OWI's Inter-Agency Publications Committee were also transferred to that Bureau.
During its existence the OWI created approximately 22,500 linear feet of records in the United States and an unestimated quantity of records in its overseas offices. The records described in this inventory are those of the Office of War Information that were in the National Archives on February 13, 1967. They amount to 2,295 cubic feet and are designated as Record Group 208. These records were received by the National Archives from the OWI and the State Department from 1942 to January 1952. They include most of the records of the Domestic Operations Branch of the OWI, the records of the Director of the OWI and of its Historian and Security Officer, part of the records of Management Services, and the nontextual and some of the textual records of the Overseas Operations Branch. Most of the records of the Overseas Operations Branch, however, have been retained by the Department of State. Personnel folders for OWI employees are in the Federal Records Center, St. Louis, Mo. These folders and the records in this record group that have been transferred from the National Archives to the Federal Records Center, Alexandria, Va., are described in appendix I of this inventory.

This inventory is organized according to the structure of the OWI during the early part of 1945. The records of predecessor agencies are listed under the records of the Director of the OWI. Entries are for the most part arranged in accordance with the importance of the official or operating unit that created the records. An exception is the listing of the records of the Office of the Historian (see entry 6) immediately after those of the Office of the Director because many of the records of the Director, the Director of the Overseas Operations Branch, and other high officials are interfiled with the records of the Historian. Since records of many OWI units are in the Department of State, the inventory does not reflect the complete organizational structure of the OWI. To remedy this, the organizational plan of the OWI is given in appendix II. Lists of selected OWI documents and issuances pertaining to various subjects have been prepared and are included as other appendixes.

In preparing this preliminary inventory, H. Stephen Helton was assisted by Ira Kellogg, Donald Goodwin, Leonard Rapport, Martha Chandler, and Barbara Murphy. In the revision made by Forrest R. Holdcamper, descriptions of photographs taken at the United Nations Conference in 1945 were furnished by Carol Blanchard and descriptions of audiovisual records by Thomas Devan.

The existing administrative services of the Director's Office and the Executive Offices of the Overseas Operations Branch in New York City and San Francisco were transferred to and consolidated with the Assistant Director's staff. His office was responsible for providing management facilities and services to all parts of the OWI in Washington and in the field. The Washington office consisted of an Executive Officer; a Division of Financial Accounts, which provided such services and facilities as budget and accounting controls; a Division of Operating Services, which handled procurement; a Personnel Management Office; and a Management Planning Division to develop improved methods of management and work. Regional executive offices of Management Services handled similar functions for OWI offices in the San Francisco and New York areas.

Many records of Management Services are in the Department of State. The personnel records of the OWI, which were maintained by Management Services, are in the Federal Records Center, St. Louis, Mo. Only the records of the Procedures Section and the San Francisco Regional Executive Office, described below, are in the National Archives.

RECORDS OF THE DOMESTIC OPERATIONS BRANCH

The Domestic Operations Branch of the OWI took over from its predecessors—the Office of Facts and Figures, the Office of Government Reports, and the Division of Information of the Office for Emergency Management (OEM)—the administration of the Government's homefront war information programs. Its primary purpose was to coordinate and facilitate the flow of information so that the public could obtain a clear and accurate picture of United States war activities, aims, and policies. In carrying out its functions on the homefront, the Branch cooperated with other Government agencies and with the regular media of public information. The Branch cleared and coordinated releases to the press of information from Government sources to prevent confusion caused by conflicting statements. In the field of radio, it developed a system for the orderly use of time and talent donated by the radio industry and sponsors of radio programs for war information purposes, and it allotted radio time to Government agencies. In the field of advertising, it coordinated the use of newspaper space, radio time, and advertising space donated to the Government to carry advertising on its war information campaigns. It also served as a central point of contact with the motion-picture industry regarding needs of the Government for special war information pictures, and it provided a channel of communication between the Government and book and magazine publishers and editors to provide facts on the war effort and information programs promoted by the OWI.

At first the functions of the Branch included production of motion pictures and publications, and field offices were maintained in most States to assist with the distribution of Government information and other OWI activities. The production activities and field offices were abolished, however, in mid-1943, following a cut in OWI's budget, and thereafter the Branch became primarily a staff organization performing the functions outlined above.

The main parts of the Branch were the Office of the Director, including the Director of War Programs and the Deputy Directors; and the media bureaus for radio, books and magazines, domestic news, motion pictures, foreign news, special services, and graphics. Each of these units is discussed in greater detail under appropriate headings of this inventory. Most of their records are in the National Archives. The records of the Deputy Director for International Affairs are in the Department of State, and records of the Inter-Agency Publications Committee are in the Bureau of the Budget.

For the Government agencies that sought to enlist public support of wartime activities it obtained the use of radio programs with a known audience. The Bureau kept the radio industry informed of the relative importance of the many requests for contributions of free time for Government programs, thus enabling the radio industry to assign time for Government messages on an orderly basis. In the fall of 1942 the field service of the two bureaus was consolidated under the Field Operations Division of the News Bureau. This Division attained bureau status in March 1943 but remained in operation only until September of that year, when reductions in the budget of the OWI's domestic operations necessitated its termination. The Bureau was responsible for the organization and operation of field offices of the Domestic Operations Branch. It coordinated the field programs of the several bureaus and supervised and managed relations of OWI field operations with field operations of other Government agencies.

The field offices--in June 1943 there were 58 located in strategic centers of civilian war activities--did mass media information work, assisted in the preparation and dissemination of information for a number of Government war agencies, and offered a centralized information service to editors, reporters, and the general public. Although administratively in the Domestic Operations Branch, the offices often obtained, at the request of the Overseas Operations Branch, special stories, recordings, statements, and editorial clippings on events of international interest. Most of the field offices were abolished in September 1943, and their records have been disposed of.

The Theatrical Division, established in 1943 by a reorganization of the Bureau of Motion Pictures, inherited the functions of a number of earlier divisions of the Bureau. Because of its small number of employees:
the Division was unable to set up sections defined as such. The records of predecessor divisions were partially reorganized, however, in an effort to bring together materials pertinent to the activities carried on after the middle of 1943. As a result, the records of the Division are described below in accordance with the main functions of the Division rather than under given organizational units. These functions were: coordination of film activities of the various Government agencies, the allocation of raw film stock requested by Government agencies, liaison with the motion picture industry and with newsreel producers, the development of ideas for film subjects, the supplying of background material on short subjects to producing companies, and the distribution of 35 mm. prints of OWI films.

The functions of this Bureau were originally performed by the Office of Facts and Figures. Following the dissolution of that Bureau in 1943, the functions were successively carried out by parts of the Bureau of Publications, by independent bureaus (the Book Bureau and the Magazine Bureau), and finally, beginning in August 1944, by the Book and Magazine Bureau. The primary function of the Bureau was to promote the war-related information programs of the Government through the media of magazines and books. This the Bureau accomplished by serving in liaison between editors, magazine writers, and literary agents seeking information and those war agencies that could supply such information. Much of the information obtained from Government sources was incorporated in the "Magazine War Guide," a monthly bulletin containing suggestions to editors and writers, which was issued by the Bureau. Similar services were offered to book publishers. Through the Bureau, war agencies had access to the talent of the Writer's War Board, a volunteer organization of leading American writers who prepared programs, speeches, and articles for widely circulated newspapers and magazines. Through its work with the Council on Books in Wartime, the Bureau also made available to war agencies the promotional facilities of numerous publishers, booksellers, and librarians. Before mid-1943 the Bureau engaged in the production of books and magazines, but this activity was eliminated because of a reduction in budget. In addition to those organizational parts of the Bureau described below, the Bureau had an Office of Book Liaison, a Writer's War Board Liaison Office, and an Editorial Section.

In active military zones its agents cooperated with military organizations in psychological warfare. The Branch established Outposts in more than 20 neutral and Allied Nations, and in areas where it had no representatives it provided State Department missions with informational materials for distribution. governing the OWI's information program for assigned geographic areas of the world. Large bureaus of the Branch existed for communications, intelligence, and the support of field offices. In New York City, under a Deputy Director for Atlantic Operations, there were the media bureaus for radio, news and features, motion pictures, and publications. In San Francisco there was an office, under a Deputy Director, which was responsible for the OWI's information output (chiefly radio broadcasts) directed at the Pacific area. A smaller office of the Branch, in Los Angeles, served the needs of both the New York and San Francisco offices for recordings of special events and interviews with motion picture personalities; it also reviewed commercial films to determine their suitability for distribution overseas. The functions and records of the Overseas Operations Branch were transferred to the State Department by the Executive order that terminated the OWI.

Office's products, transported personnel, and performed budgetary,

This Bureau was established on December 17, 1942, replacing the Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Overseas Publications. It was responsible for the production of newsreels, shorts, and picture films and for their distribution in Allied, neutral, liberated, and conquered countries. Some newsreels and factual documentary films were produced through the Bureau's own facilities and through contractual arrangements with the motion picture industry; others were acquired from other Government agencies. Films were prepared in a number of foreign languages. With the cooperation of the motion picture industry the Bureau reviewed and selected commercially made films suitable for overseas distribution. In conjunction with Allied psychological warfare services, films were shown to the civilian population of areas liberated or conquered by Allied forces. Through the Department of State, the War Production Board, and the Board of Economic Warfare, the Bureau was instrumental in arranging the allocation of raw film stock to certain neutral and Allied countries. The purpose of the films was to depict aspects of the United States, to show the Allies winning the war, and to picture the social, political, economic, and military character of the Allies.
