MEMORANDUM FOR: Philip W. Buchen
Counsel to the President
The White House

The Attorney General has asked me to provide you with a description of an objection entered under the Voting Rights Act dealing with annexations to the City of San Antonio, Texas, and a proposed response for questions on the subject which are anticipated during the President's visit there on April 8, 1976.

On February 2, 1976, the City of San Antonio completed submission of a group of 23 annexations for the Attorney General's consideration under the provisions of Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. The Act was extended to cover Texas last year, and its coverage provisions were expanded to include protection for language minority groups. Any change affecting the electoral process enacted since November, 1972, may not be enforced under this Act until approved either by the Attorney General or the District Court for the District of Columbia.

Thirteen of the annexations in question were objected to on behalf of the Attorney General by my letter of April 2, 1976, a copy of which is attached. The reason for the objection is that the addition of over 50,000 persons to the city, most of them Anglo, had the effect* of reducing the percentage of Mexican-American population and therefore the electorate in a legally-significant manner. The effect of such annexations on the electoral system must be evaluated in light of the other aspects of the system. In San Antonio, the nine-member council is elected at-large to numbered posts with a majority requirement. It presently is made up of two Mexican-Americans, one black, and six Anglo members. The population of San Antonio is slightly over 50 per cent Mexican-American, but among those registered Anglos predominate. A 1972 decision by a three-judge court ruled that at-large elections of the San Antonio delegation to the Texas General Assembly violated the voting rights of Mexican-Americans notwithstanding this bare population majority.

*The Act proscribes any change which has the "purpose or effect" of denying or abridging the right to vote on account of race. Our decision in this case was not based on purpose.

Under the Voting Rights Act, as a matter of law a submitting jurisdiction (not the government) must sustain the burden of proving that the change in question will not abridge or dilute the voting rights of the minority voters. The Attorney General cannot lawfully approve annexations which under all the electoral circumstances could have a decisive and dilutive effect on an electorate with a history of ethnic and racial bloc voting. However, the Justice Department's objection can be met merely by adopting a system of single-member districts to replace the at-large elections. If San Antonio can show that the facts are different from those we have been given by them, they can also seek reconsideration of the Attorney General's decision under the regulatory guidelines. If they believe that our view of the law is incorrect, they may challenge it in court. (Frankly, our view of the law has been moderate, so we usually win in court challenges, but this is not always so—cf. Beer v. U.S., involving New Orleans.) The adoption of single-member districts was chosen as an adequate remedy in similar circumstances by the cities of Petersburg, Virginia, and Charleston, South Carolina.

In our view, a fair application of the law compels this result, and a contrary ruling is almost certain to invite litigation against the Department. Indeed, a district court suit is already pending on this same issue, but the court has stayed litigation pending the Department's ruling.

Assistant Attorney General
Civil Rights Division
Mr. James M. Parker
City Attorney
City of San Antonio
Post Office Box 9066
San Antonio, Texas 78285

Dear Mr. Parker:

This is in reference to the November, 1974, City Charter Amendments, changes in City designated polling places, and 23 annexations to the City of San Antonio, Texas, submitted to the Attorney General pursuant to Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, as amended. Your submission was completed on February 2, 1976.

The Attorney General does not interpose any objections to the polling place changes or the City Charter Amendments. However, we feel a responsibility to point out that Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act expressly provides that the failure of the Attorney General to object does not bar any subsequent judicial action to enjoin the enforcement of these changes.

In examining the annexations submitted under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, it is incumbent for the Attorney General to determine whether the annexations, either in purpose or effect, result in voting discrimination against racial or language minorities. Our proper concern is not with the validity of the annexations as such but with the changes in voting which proceed from them.
With respect to San Antonio specifically, we note that the population of the City prior to the annexations here under submission, in November, 1972, was 53.1% Mexican-American, 38% white-Anglo, and 8.8% black and other races. The City's nine-member governing council is elected at-large, with numbered posts and a majority requirement. In November of 1974, a proposition to amend the City Charter to provide for a system of ward representation was defeated by the City electorate. However, our examination of election results by precincts indicates the proposition was favored overwhelmingly in predominantly Mexican-American and black precincts.

Facts available to us show that the annexations under submission expanded the City by 65 square miles (a 25% increase) and 51,417 persons, approximately three-fourths of whom were white-Anglo. The enlarged City is 51.1% Mexican-American, 40.4% white-Anglo, and 8.5% black and other races. Thus, after the addition of the substantial and predominantly white-Anglo population involved in several of these 23 annexations the proportional strength of Mexican-Americans necessarily has been reduced, even though Mexican-Americans still are a bare majority of the population. It is our understanding that the present City Council is composed of two Mexican-American members, one black, and six white-Anglos.

We have considered carefully all the information submitted, along with pertinent Census data and information and comments from other interested parties. On the basis of our review, the Attorney General will not object to 10 of the annexations submitted. 1/ As to these our analysis shows that they involve uninhabited areas or populations the effect of which would be de minimus or not adverse to minority voting strength. However, with regard to the other 13 annexations we cannot conclude, as we must under the Voting Rights Act, that they, when coupled with an at-large, majority vote, numbered post system of City elections, in which racial-ethnic bloc voting exists, do not have the effect of abridging the right to vote of affected minorities in San Antonio. Cf. City of Richmond v. United States, 376 F. Supp. 1344 (D. D. C. 1974), 422 U.S. 358 (1965). City of Petersburg v. United States, 354 F. Supp. 1021 (D. D. C. 1972), aff'd 410 U.S. 962 (1973). Accordingly, I must, on behalf of the Attorney General, interpose an objection to those 13 annexations.

I would emphasize that this objection relates only to the voting changes occasioned by the annexations. As the Court in the Richmond and Petersburg cases, supra, have indicated, one way to remedy this situation would be to adopt a system of fairly drawn single-member wards. Should that occur the Attorney General will reconsider the matter upon receipt of that information.

Of course, as provided by Section 5, you have an alternative of instituting an action in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia for a declaratory judgment that the annexations do not have the purpose and will not have the effect of denying or abridging the right to vote on account of race or color or in contravention of the guarantees set forth in Section 4(f)(2) of the Voting Rights Act.

Sincerely,

J. Stanley Pottinger
Assistant Attorney General
Civil Rights Division

I am aware that the Voting Rights Act has recently compelled the Attorney General to object to the effect on voting of certain annexations to San Antonio because of their effects on minority voters. The Department of Justice has assured me that its decision was not based on a finding of intentional discrimination, and I know that no such finding would be proper here. However, the Act also requires objection where there is a dilutive effect on language minority voting, and the applicable court decisions prescribe a fairly rigid test. I also understand that it is possible to meet the Justice Department's objections by modifying San Antonio's at-large system of electing its council members so that they are elected on a district-by-district basis. It is also possible for San Antonio to test the correctness of the Attorney General's ruling in court.

As I indicated when I signed the Voting Rights Act extension last year, I believe that the Voting Rights Act has helped us guarantee the right to vote to all eligible

REMARKS OF THE PRESIDENT
AT THE SIGNING OF THE VOTING RIGHTS ACT

THE ROSE GARDEN

AT 12:09 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Vice President, distinguished members of the Congress, and other distinguished guests:

I am very pleased to sign today H.R. 6219, which extends, as well as broadens, the provisions of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

The right to vote is at the very foundation of our American system and nothing must interfere with this very precious right. Today is the tenth anniversary of the signing by President Johnson of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, which I supported as a member of the House of Representatives.

In the past decade the voting rights of millions and millions of Americans have been protected and our system of government has been strengthened immeasurably. The bill I will sign today extends the temporary provisions of the Act for seven more years and broadens the provisions to bar discrimination against Spanish-speaking Americans, American Indians, Alaskan natives and Asian Americans.

Further, this bill will permit private citizens, as well as the Attorney General, to initiate suits to protect the voting rights of citizens in any State where discrimination occurs. There must be no question whatsoever about the right of each eligible American, each eligible citizen to participate in our elective process. The extension of this Act will help to insure that right.

I thank the members of the Congress, I thank their staffs and I thank all the others who have been helpful in making this signing possible.

The material at Tab B was sent Wednesday to Phil Buchen for the President's benefit in responding to possible questions on a controversial Voting Rights Act ruling affecting San Antonio. This afternoon, in a meeting with Senators Tower and Bentsen, and with Congressmen Krueger and Casey from San Antonio, new information has been developed which the President may wish to have in the event of questions. (The San Antonio press was invited by the Senators to today's meeting, and will be writing about it for tomorrow, the day of the President's visit.)

The Justice Department informs me that in a meeting with San Antonio officials and Senators Tower and Bentsen yesterday, the government learned that the City Council here strongly favors single-member districts, and that efforts are now under way to attempt to achieve them and remove the objection to the annexations. I have confidence that the Department will make every effort to make these negotiations successful.

Re: San Antonio—Congressman Krueger

I returned Congressman Krueger's call. He said that he was wondering where the Department stood on the San Antonio reconsideration, and hoped that he could sit down with you again in the event that the Civil Rights Division does not recommend a reversal of the earlier decision. He said he then got word that Senator Tower had requested such a meeting also. (I have sent a note to that effect to you already.) He said that if such a meeting takes place, he could talk to you then.

I told him that we hoped to make a recommendation to you next week, that if we found a basis for reversing our decision, we would do so, and I assumed no meeting would be necessary. In the event we found no basis to recommend a reversal, I told him that I would recommend that a meeting with affected parties be scheduled, although I could not confirm such a meeting because that depended on your schedule. He said he understood.

He said that if a meeting is to go forward, he would agree not to notify the press or have them present, and hoped that in light of our discussion on press policy at the last meeting, that would enhance the possibilities for having a meeting. I told him that I thought it would, and thanked him for his cooperation.

It was a cordial conversation which ended by my telling him that he would hear from the Department next week.

Mr. Hebert (who I know from previous meetings in this matter) called to find out why Senator Bentsen had been summoned to see the Attorney General tomorrow at 11:00 A.M. He wanted to know if the City of San Antonio had requested the meeting. I told him yes. [Hebert, and perhaps Bentsen, seemed to be in the dark about the entire matter]. Hebert wondered if Senator Bentsen would be allowed to speak in the City's behalf. I said the Attorney General would be conducting the meeting personally and I didn't know what procedures would be followed. He asked whether the Attorney General would make or announce a ruling at the meeting. I told him the Attorney General would make a final ruling but I couldn't speculate on what form or when it would be. Hebert advised he would be attending the meeting with the Senator.

The Hon. Lila Cockrell and Dr. Jose San Martin let on amidst heavy media splashes that they're in the 1977 mayor's race but the real story is there may not be a city election next year.

So Lila and the Doc, in the sense that nobody needs candidates for a non-election, may be putting first things second.

It's even conceivable that Mayor Cockrell could find herself in place as our First Lady for five or more years.

With guys like old Uncle Sam Bolde right there beside her at the City Council table throughout, blame this weird and almost incredible turn of events on the amakr, the purge, and assorted wet-behind-the-ears dum-dums of the U.S. Department of Justice.

IF ALL STARTED last year when San Antonio was put under the federal Voting Rights Act. Now the Justice Dept. has a right to go back and review the city's massive annihilation of 1972.

Of course, San Antonio's main idea in 1972 was to grab several outlying belts of real estate before they turned into autonomous, bedroom burghs, standing in the way of city expansion and progress.

It was also nice to add valuable properties to city tax rolls.

Not predictably, deposed young libs under J. Stanley Pottinger of the Justice Dept., found deeper and more decisive motives.

After "discovering" the '72 annihilation and lowered the city ratio of Mexican-Americans to Anglo voters by a couple of percentiles, these dudes decided the whole thing was a stunning, long-shot strip of the Mexican-American of his voting rights.

In short, the poor bums took some abstract figures, and then -- with no real ground background data -- parlayed them into a vicious indictment of the Anglo community here.

SINCE THEN, J. Stanley Pottinger of the Justice Dept. has dug his bureaucratic feet into the ground and refuses to back off his phony hypothesis by so much as inch.

City officials trying to deal with this man describe him as arrogant, stuffy, cold, opinionated and "anything but the genius he seems to think he is."

They give him figures to correct screwed-up Justice Department records on local votes, but he does not change the records.

To Pottinger, the Anglos are remorselessly kicking around Mexicans here, and that's that.

He commands us now to do one of two things: go to single member districts in future city elections, or de-annex from 1972.

If we take the first option, the new districting plan will have to meet with Pottinger's approval in the last 14 months.

Meanwhile, 12 bells will ring out into federal district court and convince San Antonio city elections of 1972.

In other words, we've been had, bad, bad -- and to purge ourselves now, we must let this Washington dim-Snellt Pottinger write the full script on how to run future city electoral affairs.

And don't shrug off the threat as empty -- Richmond, Va., and the great city of New Orleans each has gone without elections for upwards of five years thanks to the U.S. Department of Justice.

MAYOR COCKRELL last week declared publicly that the City Council is ready to call a charter revision election here.

She said a large majority of council members favor single member districts.

But she indicated there will be no charter election unless the Justice Dept. quits breathing down the council's neck.

In effect she was saying, "Just leave us alone, please, to run our own business the way it should be run!"

Then she went a step further and suggested the city will drag J. Stanley Pottinger and disciples into court if they don't keep hands off.

Most City Hall insiders believe we'll be in court sooner or later against these meddling, all-pervasive and power-hungry bureaucrats of the Justice Dept.

"They don't know what Texas election laws are, and they don't care," said City Atty. Jim Parker who added:

"Is it any wonder Jimmy Carter and Richard Reagan -- the candidates most strongly in favor of bureaucrat takeover in this country -- are so popular nowadays?"

Dear Stan:

I am writing to you on two issues of major concern to MALDEF and the Chicano community.

First, the Department is presently reconsidering its objection to the City of San Antonio annexations. Since the request for reconsideration, the City has been sending comments to the Department seeking to have the objection withdrawn. Every time new data is submitted, the Department looks toward MALDEF and the Mexican American Equal Rights Project for analysis of the data. Once the City's data is refuted, the City submits more data, etc., etc. The City has virtually unlimited resources to conjure up theories, models, projections which tend to support their position. There is no way that we can compete with the City in this numbers game; also, the Department itself is not geared to examining complicated mathematical models and theories. Consequently, we are being left at the mercy of computers and theoreticians, both in the hands of a city that has been found by U.S. courts as having discriminated against Mexican Americans.

Under the law, the jurisdiction has the burden of proving that the electoral change is not discriminatory in intent or effect. Also, under the law the Department of Justice is the chief enforcement agency. To this date, we have carried the burden of showing discrimination; to this date we, not the Department, have supplied most of the data and analyses used in making the determination. resources are being stretched to the point where a decision adverse to the Chicano community might be made just because the community's resources could not match those of the City's. This is not what the enforcement of the Voting Rights Act is all about.

We understand that the final decision on the San Antonio submission will be made by the Attorney General. After the initial objection by the Department you had a widely publicized meeting with Texas Congressional persons and with representatives from the City of San Antonio. On April 12, 1976, I wrote you a letter asking for an opportunity to confer with the appropriate Department officials about San Antonio's request for reconsideration. To this day, I have received no response to my letter. Your own regulations state that organizations submitting comments (such as MALDEF) shall be given the opportunity to confer with the Department; this has not been done even though a conference has been held by the Department with the submitting jurisdiction.

I hereby repeat my request for an opportunity to confer with the appropriate Department official before a determination on the reconsideration is made. The appropriate Department official should be the person making the final decision on the San Antonio submission.

Secondly, MALDEF has been highly troubled by the way this complicated issue has been handled. No person is to be faulted; there are just certain deficiencies in the Department's overall procedures. Also, fear has been expressed by the Chicano community that the San Antonio issue has been politicized to the point where the final decision will be based on considerations other than the law; this is intolerable.

This is an important issue and I urge your most urgent attention to this matter.

Subject: San Antonio

Please see the incoming letter from MALDEF (and my response). Should you decide to reverse our objection, it may be important to meet with Mr. Perez, given the number of meetings we have granted others. Of course, should you sustain our objection, I think a meeting is unnecessary.

Dear Al:

I am in receipt of your letter of May 24, 1976.

As you know, my staff and I have presently under consideration a request for reconsideration of the Attorney General's objection by the City of San Antonio. It is my understanding that you and all persons in the NAACP office in San Antonio have been promptly notified of any information submitted by the city in support of its request for reconsideration. You have personally met with Mr. Michael Corley of my staff on several occasions and your views and comments have been made known. I am somewhat at a loss to understand your complaint about not being afforded an opportunity for input in this matter.

However, under our guidelines for the administration of Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, you, or any other interested party, may request a formal conference with me or my staff before a final decision is made on the city's request. If you would like a conference scheduled on this matter, please contact Mr. Gerald W. Jones, Chief of the Voting Section (739-2167) to arrange a time that is mutually convenient. Any request should be made promptly inasmuch as a final decision on the city's request for reconsideration will be made within a couple of weeks.

Sincerely,

Dear Stan:

I am writing to you on two issues of major concern to MALDEF and the Chicano community.

First, the Department is presently reconsidering its objection to the City of San Antonio annexations. Since the request for reconsideration, the City has been sending comments to the Department seeking to have the objection withdrawn. Every time new data is submitted, the Department looks toward MALDEF and the Mexican American Equal Rights Project for analysis of the data. Once the City's data is refuted, the City submits more data, etc., etc. The City has virtually unlimited resources to conjure up theories, models, projections which tend to support their position. There is no way that we can compete with the City in this numbers game; also, the Department itself is not geared to examining complicated mathematical models and theories. Consequently, we are being left at the mercy of computers and theoreticians, both in the hands of a city that has been found by U. S. courts as having discriminated against Mexican Americans.

Dear Mr. Wheatley:

This is in reference to the request of the City of San Antonio for reconsideration of the objections interposed on April 2, 1976, to 13 annexations, pursuant to Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, as amended.

I have given careful and personal review to the materials provided by the city attorney and you in your letters and in our meeting with Mayor Cockrell, Congressman Krueger and others on June 22, 1976.

The Voting Rights Act, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, places on a covered jurisdiction such as San Antonio the special burden of proving that changes which affect voting do not have a discriminatory purpose or effect. I have found no basis for concluding that the annexations in question were purposefully dilutive of protected minority voting rights. However, I am not able to conclude that the annexations in question do not have the proscribed effect on the voting rights of Mexican-Americans in San Antonio. Were this a standard constitutional challenge to the annexations, one might well reach a contrary conclusion. Because the burden of proof imposed by Congress in the Voting Rights Act, rests with the covered jurisdiction to show that there is no effect, and requires me to object in the absence of such showing, I am obliged to continue the objections previously interposed.

In establishing a method for prompt review of voting changes by the Attorney General, the Voting Rights Act recognized that there would be disagreements with the Attorney General's view of the law and provided that a jurisdiction may test its correctness in legal proceedings. I was most impressed by Mayor Cockrell's presentation of the significance of these annexations to the City of San Antonio and would, of course, understand if the city desired to contest this determination. Should you decide not to seek such review, however, I am sure that Assistant Attorney General Pottinger and his staff will assist the city in seeking the most sensible way to formulate a transitional remedy which meets the congressional purposes.

I earnestly hope that the matter can be resolved to the mutual satisfaction of all concerned.

Sincerely,
Stan:

Attached are copies of the San Antonio letters in case you get calls on them.

Gerry told me that everything went according to schedule this morning. Mr. Wheatley was not surprised at our continued objection and said he would inform Mayor Cockrell. Mr. Wheatley asked Gerry to give some thought to the problem of an election for a referendum on single member districts and who would be entitled to vote in it.

Dear Mr. Wheatley:

This is in reference to the request of the City of San Antonio for reconsideration of the objections interposed on April 2, 1976, to 13 annexations, pursuant to Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, as amended.

I have given careful and personal review to the materials provided by the city attorney and you in your letters and in our meeting with Mayor Cockrell, Congressman Krueger and others on June 22, 1976.

The Voting Rights Act, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, places on a covered jurisdiction such as San Antonio the special burden of proving that changes which affect voting do not have a discriminatory purpose or effect. I have found no basis for concluding that the annexations in question were purposefully dilutive of protected minority voting rights. However, I am not able to conclude that the annexations in question do not have the proscribed effect on the voting rights of Mexican-Americans in San Antonio. In this connection I have had to keep in mind the opinion of the Supreme Court in White v. Regester, 412 U.S.755 (1973), which left standing the 1972 three-judge District Court ruling invalidating multimember districts in Bexar County and which refers to the District Court's assessment of the various factors involved. Were this a standard constitutional challenge to the annexations, one might well reach a contrary conclusion. Because the burden of proof imposed by Congress in the Voting Rights Act rests with the covered jurisdiction to show that there is no effect, and requires me to object in the absence of such a showing, I am obliged to continue the objections previously interposed.

In establishing a method for prompt review of voting changes by the Attorney General, the Voting Rights Act recognized that there would be disagreements with the Attorney General's view of the law and provided that a jurisdiction may test its correctness in legal proceedings. I was most impressed by Mayor Cockrell's presentation of the significance of these annexations to the City of San Antonio and would, of course, understand if the city desired to contest this determination. Should you decide not to seek such review, however, I am sure that Assistant Attorney General Pottinger and his staff will assist the city in seeking the most sensible way to formulate a transitional remedy which meets the congressional purposes.

I earnestly hope that the matter can be resolved to the mutual satisfaction of all concerned.

Edward H. Levi
Attorney General
Dear Senator Tower:

I am writing in response to your letter of June 29, 1976, concerning the application of Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act to 13 annexations involving the City of San Antonio. On my behalf, the Civil Rights Division interposed an objection to the annexations on April 2, 1976, and the City later requested my reconsideration of the matter. After a personal review of the materials submitted, I have decided that I must affirm the Division's determination.

Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act requires the Attorney General to enter an objection to any electoral change, including an annexation, involving a jurisdiction covered by the Act, unless he determines that the change "does not have the purpose and will not have the effect of denying or abridging the right to vote on account of race or color." 42 U.S.C. § 1973c. The Supreme Court has held that the Act requires that an objection be entered if the electoral change has either a discriminatory purpose or effect and that the burden of proof on this issue rests with the covered jurisdiction.

There is no question in this case that the annexations were not enacted for the purpose of diluting the voting rights of Mexican-Americans in San Antonio. The issue, rather, is whether the annexations had the discriminatory effect prohibited by the Act. In making this determination, there has been a problem in obtaining accurate figures on overall population and voting age population in San Antonio at the time of the... annexations. Using the most accurate figures, it would appear that there has in fact been a dilution of the voting rights of Mexican-Americans as a result of the annexations. In this connection, I have had to keep in mind the opinion of the Supreme Court in White v. Regester, 412 U.S. 755 (1973), which affirmed the 1972 three-judge District Court ruling invalidating multimember districts in Bexar County (consisting primarily of San Antonio) as discriminatory against Mexican-Americans and which refers to the District Court's assessment of the various factors involved, including the history of racial block voting. In view of these factors, I cannot conclude that the City of San Antonio has met its burden of proving that the annexations did not have the discriminatory effect proscribed by the Act.

As the Department has explained to the City previously, the Supreme Court has held that a system of fairly drawn single member districts would cure the discriminatory effect of the annexations in question. Assistant Attorney General Pottinger and his staff stand ready to assist the City in seeking a sensible way to formulate a transitional remedy which meets the Congressional purposes. Of course, should the City disagree with my view of the law, the Voting Rights Act provides that it may file an action in the District Court for the District of Columbia Circuit for a determination that the annexations did not have a discriminatory effect.

It is my hope that this matter can be resolved in a manner satisfactory to all parties concerned.

Sincerely,

Edward H. Levi

Telephone Conversations with Seagal Wheatley, Attorney for the City of San Antonio

On July 16, 1976, Mr. Wheatley called me in response to my call of the previous evening to his office in San Antonio. I explained that the Attorney General had made his ruling re San Antonio's annexation and inquired as to whether he could be reached in about an hour (at 11:45) so that I might relay that decision to him.

He said he would be reachable at the office of Mr. Lance, Brownsville Navigation District, Brownsville, Texas, at 512/831-4592.

I later called Mr. Wheatley on July 16, 1976, to report that the Attorney General's decision on the request for reconsideration from San Antonio on the objection to 13 annexations had been made. I read him the Attorney General's letter. Wheatley wanted to know what was meant by the letter's language about "a transitional remedy." I told him that that merely referred to devising some system or modification of a system that would remove or minimize the dilutive effect that we perceived in the annexations so that the city could continue to realize the benefits of those annexations.

Wheatley said he would call the mayor and advise her of the decision. Said that the City Council had met yesterday (July 15, 1976) to discuss what action they might take if the Attorney General declined to withdraw the objection. He has not been able to consult them since their meeting and won't know until...

he gets back to San Antonio next week what they would propose. However, in any event, San Antonio will want to go to single-member districts or some combination of single-member and at-large. The important thing is that they will want the new form of government voted on by the electorate. Therefore, he would like us to give some thought to who will be able to vote in such an election. He has been thinking in terms of letting everyone vote but to count the votes only in the district in which the voter would fall if the districts were in effect. Thus, those majority Mexican-American districts could determine whether they want to have district or at-large elections and the majority Anglo could do the same thing. He asked that we think about the possibility and any others and that he would get back to us as soon as they have worked out something on their course of action. He thanked me for apprising him of the text of the determination.
I thought you might like to read this!
Whatever became of J. Stanley Pottinger?

It's a bit hard to believe but the recent national election seems to have brought — momentarily no doubt — the blessings of democracy to Washington, D.C.

Travelers returning from the banks of the Potomac report that high level bureaucrats are actually treating humble citizens from the provinces with civility — even with a hint of sympathy. Apparently the folks in the burners are busy winning friends as a result of an afterthought from the Nov. 3 election.

Strained

There may be only some 2,000 cushy jobs up for grabs as a result of the change of administration but feelings of uncertainty go deeper. After all, Jimmy Carter has promised stern reorganization of the bureaucracy and when such talk is in the air, those in the upper levels of government service want all the friends out there that they can get.

All this may have a softening effect on San Antonio's relations with the U.

S. Justice Department. Those have been strained, to say the least, since J. Stanley Pottinger, the department's civil rights czar, ruled that San Antonio's Citizens United Act of 1977 violated the Voting Rights Act.

It was a clearly questionable ruling, but Pottinger imperiously squelched protesting delegations of local officials. The result of course, is the charter change election of Jan. 31 which is supposed to purge the city's parapets of its past.

Now, suddenly, the atmosphere at Justice has changed. Pottinger, it is reported, is in the way out. His high post was bestowed by the Nixon Administration and he is expected to give way to a Carter appointee.

The city's local staffers find that the Civil Rights Division people are all pleased and cream when discussing election preparations.

For those who have thought that San Antonio was a law rule city which could settle its own election affairs, it should be explained that under the Voting Rights Act city hall must now check the most minute details of an election with Washington.

Command performance

And that is especially true in the case of the Jan. 31 charter election which was practically ordered by Justice.

At any rate, the city now finds Justice staffers so amiable that they have found nothing to criticize in the plan for 10 council districts.

There was not even a murmur of protest when Justice was notified that the city council intends to allow citizens in the unincorporated area to vote — and also intends to count the votes for real.

Since Pottinger had ruled the annexation illegal, it was feared that Justice would logically conclude the folks out there to the northwest could not vote — though it had judicially agreed that they could pay taxes.

Part of the improved climate at Justice may be due to the fact that the civil rights lawyers report they received word from Dr. Charles Cotrell, the St. Mary's University professor, clearing the city's plans.

After all, Cotrell was a prime witness at Congressional hearings on extending the Voting Rights Act to Texas. He testified at length on the sins of the present system which has council members running citywide. The friendly recent talks with Justice have city staffers feeling that the local election may go off without a hitch.

Impartiality

Of course, the voters themselves may weigh their backs and defeat the Justice-decreed charter scheme.

In that case, the gloves would be likely to come off.

But then, perhaps Pottinger's successor might read the Voting Rights law and the local situation the way most impartial lawyers do, and forget the whole thing.

The change of administrations, meanwhile, is creating pretty dimpy waves on the local job front, aside from the traditional rash of candidates for the posts of U. S. Attorney, U. S. Marshal and any judicial vacancies.

While the GOP administration produced top level Washington posts for San Antonians Henry Kale, Art Trejo, Doug Harlan and Mary Lou Grier, local Democrats have no real prospects for the upper echelon of the Carter regime.

In line with the careful advance planning of the president-elect a canvas was made some time ago of outstanding local women for the so-called 31st Per cent Committee.

The results went into the Carter talent bank, but one of those who conducted the study reports that most Bexar County prospects simply were not interested in going to Washington.
