

A. NOVEL Polygraphed by Lloyd FURR on Garrison's Charges.

Gordon Wayne NOVEL, already a fugitive witness in the Garrison inquiry, is reported in the Washington press of 27 March 1967 as having been polygraphed the previous day on the case under investigation by Garrison. According to the press reports, NOVEL submitted to a polygraph examination conducted at McLean, Virginia by Lloyd FURR. In statements to the press, FURR indicated there was no indication of deception to NOVEL's charges that Garrison's case is a "frame-up".

B. Lloyd FURR's Relationship to Richard L. BAST and REDEX.

Lloyd FURR, a former District of Columbia policeman and now a private detective, is a self-proclaimed polygraph "expert" and sound device specialist. He has received publicity in the past for planting sound devices for the late Fulton Lewis, Jr. in the St. Mary's County vice case in 1953 and in 1958 when he discovered listening devices being used against Bernard Goldfine. In 1964, information was received that a Washington, D. C. firm, REDEX, operated by FURR and Richard L. BAST, was attempting to sell electronic equipment to Communist China via an agent in Hong Kong. (TSD had unclassified contact with FURR in 1962 to see equipment offered for sale by FURR.)

C. Richard L. BAST and REDEX.

Richard L. BAST, a Washington, D. C. private detective, gained notoriety in 1965 by turning up a missing witness, previously unlocated by the Department of Justice, in connection with the Lobby Baker case. He is known to operate at least four enterprises: 1) CAPITAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION, a private detective agency; 2) REDEX VIETNAM, INC., a firm which imports a variety of commodities ranging from liquor to automobiles into South Vietnam, including, of late, U. S. -recruited "go-go" girls for a Saigon nightclub he is planning; 3) REDEX COMMERCE, a firm which sells almost anything to anybody abroad, other than South Vietnam; and 4) CONSOLIDATED ARMAMENTS, a firm which sells small arms to foreign governments and private individuals abroad. BAST also produces and distributes both passive audio and counteraudio devices in the U. S. and over the BAST, described as "unscrupulous and untrustworthy" is known to have attempted to contract with another agent, effective for planting a remote-controlled bomb in the headquarters of the Haiti Secret Police, and has been reported to have undertaken similar extreme assignments for exile groups in Haiti and the Dominican Republic. (Based on depository information on file, DCS, in March 1967, decided against previously contemplated contact with BAST as a source of information on Asia.)

2. BAST, TURNER, and William W. TURNER of RAMPARTS

OS-
CIA sources provided information that during January 1967, William W. TURNER, who identified himself as a free-lance writer, visited the offices of the Asia Foundation, requesting information for a magazine article. He stated that he had been asked by Col Stern of New York to gather information for an article in the New York Times. During his visit, however, it was obvious that TURNER was primed to ask questions about the financing of the foundation, rather than its actual operational activities. When TURNER concluded the interview he left a calling card with the firm name "REDEX-PACIFIC".
It appears he had to have new cards printed. TURNER, reportedly dismissed from the FBI in 1961, is noted to have written an article in the November 1966 issue of RAMPARTS magazine in which he describes alleged wiretapping, surveillance activity, etc., performed by him while with the FBI.
It is noted that he claimed to represent, as assistant manager, the Editor of RAMPARTS Magazine.

3. Role of TURNER and BAST in CIA Meeting of Exile

(This paragraph has attempted to detail the contact of NOVEL with TURNER, TURNER's connection with BAST, and a possible connection between BAST's organization and RAMPARTS.
The following indicates the only CIA involvement in the chain of events but he exploited in subsequent attempts to link CIA to the entire affair in question.)

On 11/11/67, [redacted] (then Chief, W.E./I and [redacted] Station, directed a memorandum to the Chief,

He documented a conversation he had on 27 April 1963 with Raymond CASSAGNOL, an anti-Duvalierist. In the memorandum he relates that the conversation took place in the home of Richard L. BAST who met through a neighbor, Lloyd FURK.

The memorandum relates CASSAGNOL's background, family, political stance, etc. Reported as significant by Owen is a conversation by BAST that the following week BAST would be sending a shipment of arms to a CASSAGNOL-affiliated group in the Dominican Republic. Owen noted: "Raymond BAST gives appearance of thinking well of Richard L. BAST. According to CASSAGNOL, his brother, Jacques, also knows BAST and respects him. Thus BAST, in spite of certain personal shortcomings from the intelligence standpoint, does represent an established channel to at least one segment of the DR in opposition to Duvalier. Since according to his own statement, BAST is supplying arms to CASSAGNOL's group, further transactions of this type via BAST presumably would not be difficult to arrange." He also provided a detailed information on what he learned of BAST, noting that BAST had mentioned Dominican distrust of State and AID and the fact that "the DR people resented them" (the Dominicans).

An FBI report on BAST dated 19 June 1963 reports that [redacted] Foreign Service Reserve Officer, USDS" (his cover) had reported 16 May 1963 his attendance at dinner at BAST's home on 27 April 1963. [redacted] told of his meeting with CASSAGNOL, BAST's intention to sell arms to the Dominican Republic and political allies, etc. He also reports that on 7 May 1963, BAST requested to perform some translation work. The translation, however, related to BAST giving a power of attorney to a [redacted] lawyer, JOSEPH Martinez of the Dominican Republic to prepare a constitution for legal establishment of REDEX CORPORATION, a DR branch of BAST's firm. According to Owen, the stock was to be held by the head of the DR National Security Agency, the head of the DR secret police, and an individual well-connected with Dominican Republic police and intelligence groups. BAST is also noted to have told Owen after BAST had made to "bug" the office of the Dominican
