And not so much, only now on the streets and the tramps are more like the Soviets who have sexual partners would come from they'd drink cognac when they did it have liquor than the students preferred the chicha to the tramps, not the Soviets - the Soviets didn't see

Q What was said of the Soviet technicians who got to Cuba?

A The students valued them, that is, the students are with the regime. I lived with those who were most opposed to it, the middle class. The peasants are also with the regime. The middle class is almost its entirety, which was the most numerous. In Cuba what Fidel says is the truth, there's no discussion of it, at that time that's the way it was. For example you were discussing any subject with a Cuban and the Cuban said to you No, but Fidel said this that meant not that way. I don't know whether it's the same now, but at that time they really revered him at the university. Sure there were some problems, but the director of the university was Cabral and ~~Cabral was popular~~, a perfect idol, a wonderfully violent sort of type he was a leader of those in the university. In other problem about Cuba, wasn't saying exactly what Fidel was saying but had his own opinion well then they threw Cabral out and put in a guy named Rebello, Jose Rebello, scarcely in the job displeased the students, this was the only problem the government had nobody liked him, the Cubans were going to take a crack at him, nobody liked him

Q What other activities did the Venezuelans who were there indulge in?

A At that time there was a small group of Venezuelans, first they started the Cuban-Venezuelan Institute, which exists there then they set up what was called the week of solidarity for Venezuela, started a newspaper called Venezuela in Arms, then the paper and the institute undertook to spread Cuban news and with that work the Venezuelans had to talk about everything they sent me to a tobacco factory there in that factory what was going on in Venezuela was explained.

Q From whom did you get instructions about what you were to say about what was going on in Venezuela?

A Well, as Cubans say, that's not the point still I for example gave a talk in the Venezuelan Institute of Carlos Orive, later Federico Rondon about the newspapers that were coming there's another Venezuelan Villalobos they all talked afterwards they gave a lot of abbreviations and non-existent stuff.

Q Then through Pedro Franco you arranged your trip to Venezuela. How was that trip arranged? Who paid for it? How did you leave Cuba? With what documents did you leave?

A With the Colombian passport. This is good luck if you go from Havana to Prague you don't need a visa then from Prague to Paris no visa is necessary, and from Paris to Legenda you don't need one either that means from Havana to Legenda without a visa.
