Approximate addresses as above (they apparently change addresses every 2 or 3 months)

All go to Pol and Lang school

All members of FDJ

None known

None of the s/m are married. They are hostile towards everyone and are always in trouble. They have all been in gaol at one time or another for fighting and the German people dislike them. They are given more privileges and money than the other allied defectors there because they are looked upon by the Russians as some of the 'downtrodden peoples from capitalist countries'.

Goes to a political school in DRESDEN
First President of the 'Foreigners' FDJ in BAUTZEN
and is now an 'AKTIVIST'.
One, unsuccessful, (Feb 54)
At first [REDACTED] did not want to stay in BAUTZEN but realised the uselessness of a negro trying to escape, so decided to make the best of his predicament. He works for the Russians and has spoken at big meetings and on the radio. He is not married but has had a few affairs with married women. Likes dancing.

(g) [REDACTED] (Russian)

[REDACTED] saw [REDACTED] for the first and last time in March 1954 at MAGDEBURG when he was briefly interrogated by him (see PART III para 3 sub para (e)). He dressed, spoke and looked like an American. He appeared to be regarded with considerable importance by the Russian officers and men. He is fairly tall, dark and slightly bald.

(h) [REDACTED] (Russian)

First seen in BAUTZEN April 54 and last seen during the winter of 1954. He came to BAUTZEN and stayed in the HOTEL WEISSES ROSS. He asked the allied residents questions about their welfare and any problems they had. He usually stayed for periods of two days, and made three or four visits in all.

(j) [REDACTED]

An English journalist who is suspected of editing a newspaper in the DDR, written in English, in favour of Communism, and originating from BERLIN.
The name was familiar to [REDACTED] though he cannot remember how. [REDACTED] did state that BAUTZEN residents could get a paper written in English originating from East BERLIN. This paper was headed THE GERMAN REPORT and underneath this title in smaller print was the word 'DEMOCRATIC'.
The contents of the newspaper amounted to a superficial intelligence summary of what was happening in the West Zone, and West Sector of BERLIN.

(k) [REDACTED] (re Sunday Pictorial dated 1 Jan 56

6. Comments on civilian population

- (a) During [redacted]'s stay in BAUTZEN he observed KOREAN students from DRESDEN who used to go to dances in BAUTZEN, they were studying politics, economy, etc. There were also 20 - 30 Greeks, including girls and boys, in BAUTZEN, going to the Engineering school. [redacted], US defector, and Russian 'trustee' who is allowed to travel, also told [redacted] of Chinese studying at LEIPZIG. All the a/n foreigners were Communists, though it is noteworthy that many were merely young boys and girls.
- (b) In the course of associating with civilians, Russians and KVP in BAUTZEN, [redacted] formed the opinion from conversations, and from observations that the Russians were hated by the majority of the civilian population. There were incidents i.e. a Russian officer was found murdered with a hatchet, there was sabotage in the factories, i.e. LOWE and LEA, and various other acts of resistance. The KVP with whom [redacted] conversed, expressed the resolution that if the Eastern powers declared war on AMERICA one day, the KVP would leave them the next.
- (c) Civilians regarded the KVP and FDJ as similar movements to the HJ and 'Hitlerism' and consequently hated the organisation, but not the members of it, as they realised that they were practically forced to enlist in one or the other. The civilians hated the Russians for what they did on entering the district towards the end of the war, one incident quoted was when a Russian soldier commandeered an alarm clock from a civilian; the alarm rang some time later and the soldier thinking it a booby trap shot the civilian dead.
