MEMORANDUM OF VISIT TO: Joseph Raymond MEROLA
2019 North Bay Road
Miami Beach, Florida

1. For several months I have been contacted on occasion by Joseph Merola, notorious smuggler, gunrunner and general. He has expressed interest in offering his assistance in connection with the Cuban situation. Because of his background I have always evaded. However, on 6 Feb 61 he called saying he had some information concerning a Brazilian Senator, a close friend and confidante of "Che" Guevara, that we should know about.

2. I contacted the FBI to check on Merola's background and what that while he has a long record, he undoubtedly could speak authoritatively concerning international affairs; interest in his ability to smuggle goods and other contraband. As a consequence I visited Merola at his palatial home in Miami Beach.

3. Merola informed me that he is currently "at liberty" on two counts: a) A two-year probation in connection with his conviction on a charge of bringing the son-in-law of Fulgencio Batista, General Miranda, to the US in a clandestine fashion following the Castro takeover, and b) an appeal being taken against a conviction involving a theft of guns from a National Guard armory. Merola was given five years but his appeal is expected to drag on indefinitely.

4. When queried about the Brazilian Senator, Merola said that he has not yet received details, but that Sam Kay, one of his associates in the Latin American contraband business, told him that the Senator was interested in developing a project whereby large quantities of whiskey would be smuggled into Brazil. He said that the Senator had visited Cuba following Castro's victory and had been the special guest of "Che" Guevara. No other details were made available at the time of the interview of Merola.

5. It is my opinion that the principal reason for Merola contacting us was to ascertain if we would lobby on his behalf with the Federal Court to rescind the travel restriction currently imposed on him so that Merola could go to Brazil to work out details of the whiskey smuggling. I informed him that there would be no possibility of us being of assistance in the matter.

6. Merola then stated that he had been actively engaged in gunrunning in behalf of Fidel Castro during the revolt against Batista. He stated that following Castro's victory he had gone to Havana, and had been received warmly by Fidel Castro and Camilo Cienfuegos. He furnished some details concerning these contacts, as well as his contact with Colonel "Johnnie" Abbes, head of the Dominican secret police also a contact of his, which are being forwarded in report form.

7. Merola also indicated that he is very well acquainted with Antonio de Varona, head of the FRD, and felt that he would be able to provide definite assistance to the Frente should he be called upon. He has a 63-foot boat available which he would not be adverse to "lending" to his friends.

8. He also mentioned that he realizes that we are not in a position to be "persuasive" with Castro agents in Miami, or with firms making clandestine shipments to Cuba via the British West Indies, Mexico or Canada. Merola expressed the opinion that he might be able to be of considerable assistance in "discussions" with individuals or corporations re their desisting from lending aid to Castro.

9. We expressed appreciation for his offer of assistance but stated that it was very unlikely that we would request any help; however, we would be glad to hear details of any Latin American intrigue which comes to his attention, and which could be of any significance.

10. No further contact is contemplated, but for the record the following is submitted:
