DATE 1/21/90

(S) [A confidential source abroad on March 30, 1963, advised that the British Intelligence Service, the United States Coast Guard, and Government officials in Washington, D. C., have been working very closely on a matter concerning the subject, William Johnson, a pilot and close friend of the subject, and one Jose Maria Gonzalez. [The above-mentioned confidential source abroad advised that on March 29, 1963, these three individuals arrived at Havana, Cuba, by commercial plane and spent the night there. The following day they chartered a private plane which took them to Norman Key, Bahamas. On the morning of March 30, 1963, they were picked up by the British at Norman Key, at which time they possessed two planes, one British and one United States, radio sets, crystals, a camera with film, and a high-powered radio receiving set. The British authorities took these individuals back to Havana and put them aboard a commercial flight destined for Miami, Florida, that same evening.] (S)

Following the Interagency Conference which was held in Miami on March 30, 1963, Sterling J. Cottrell, Coordinator of Cuban Affairs, Bureau of Inter-American Affairs, Department of State, received a telephone call from his headquarters in Washington, D. C. Following this conversation, Cottrell returned to Harvey Ann, State Department representative in Miami, and a representative of our Miami Office, that the United States Coast Guard had sent a patrol plane to Norman Key on the basis of information which had been furnished by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) indicating that the subject and others were proceeding to Norman Key in connection with some anti-Castro undertaking which
