INTRODUCTION

On the nine rolls of this microfilm publication, M1925, are reproduced records relating to intelligence and financial investigations of the Financial Intelligence Group, Office of the Finance Adviser (FINAD or OFA), Office of Military Government, U.S. Zone [OMGUS], during the period 1945–1949. This series, Records Regarding Intelligence and Financial Investigations, 1945–1949 [A1, Entry 574], is contained within Records of U.S. Occupation Headquarters, World War II, Record Group (RG) 260.

BACKGROUND

The origin of the Office of the Finance Adviser and its predecessor, the Finance Division, can be traced to February 14, 1944, when the reorganization of the Civil Affairs Division of Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Forces (SHAEF) created a German Country Section with a finance division as one of its component parts. Six months later, European Theater of Operations United States Army (ETOUSA) established the U.S. Group Control Council for Germany (USGCC). The rapid growth in staff and in activities due to the changing military situation in Europe, however, required further redefinition of finance functions and responsibilities. On November 25, 1944, Finance became one of the 12 independent divisions set up within USGCC.

Following the surrender of Germany on May 8, 1945, the Finance Division undertook investigations based both on captured German records and on interrogations of German officials. These investigations sought to locate German assets concealed abroad in “safe-havens” secured through secret arrangements between the Nazis and German industrialists that would fund party operations in case of the defeat of Germany. The Division continued to block and freeze those assets in order to prevent their possible use in funding underground Nazi activities from within postwar Germany.

In June 1945, the Financial Intelligence and Liaison Branch of the Finance Division was established to secure and collate financial intelligence from various sources, including other military government units, and conduct investigations of financial institutions and other aspects of the German financial structure. In this way, the Branch supplied other operating and policy-making agencies with the information necessary for the formulation of policy, for the checking of the effectiveness of its execution, and for the proposal of amendments to existing law or procedures.

The Office of Military Government, U.S. Zone (Germany) [OMGUS] became the successor to the USGCC on October 1, 1945. The Branch, now a part of the OMGUS Finance Division, continued to investigate the links between the Nazi party and government with German banking and industry and concentrated on locating property that was transferred under duress or through wrongful acts of confiscation, disposition, or spoliation from many European countries, including gold removed by the German Army (Wehrmacht) from various national treasuries. The Branch conducted interrogations of leading Reichsbank and other financial officials that led to the discovery of hoards of gold and other valuables hidden in caves and salt mines, identified German external assets, and uncovered the role of the Reichsbank in the disposition of SS “loot” seized from concentration camp inmates. This included non-monetary gold such as dental fillings and scrap jewelry. The latter information was used at the trial of Reichsbank President Walther Funk at Nürnberg.

The Branch subsequently focused its attention more and more on the collection, evaluation, and analysis of intelligence connected with financial conditions within the German economy and the degree to which they were developing within the framework established by the quadripartite agreement.

The Financial Intelligence Group, created on February 18, 1948, was the successor to the Financial Intelligence and Liaison Branch. Its functions were limited to conducting both special and continuing investigation in the finance field; providing intelligence in support of policy formulation, negotiations, and operations by the soon-to-be established Office of Finance Adviser (OFA); preparing reports required of the OFA; and representing the OFA in all matters pertaining to travel policy and individual travel clearance. The OMGUS Finance Division was dissolved effective March 1, 1948, and the OFA and the Property Division were established. From the former Finance Division, the OFA retained the power of review regarding policy changes and proposals; the interpretation of partite agreements, programs, and policies with implications for subjects other than finance; and the review of policies requiring Länder implementation. Responsibilities for foreign exchange, the blocking and freezing of property, and external assets were transferred to the Property Division.

The transition from military to civilian occupation administration was initiated by the Presidential appointment of the U.S. High Commissioner for Germany (HICOG), who assumed his duties on September 2, 1949. On September 3, 1949, the functions, personnel, equipment, and records of both the OFA and the Finance Division were transferred to the newly created Finance Division in the Office of Economic Affairs of HICOG, which assumed responsibility for the field of finance. The transition was completed by September 21, 1949, the same day of the establishment of the Federal Republic of Germany. OMGUS was formally abolished on December 5, 1949. Most of the OMGUS records, including the records of the Financial Intelligence Group, were retired to an Army record center in Kansas City until they were accessioned into the National Archives in the early 1960s.
