This month, we are featuring the Archives Library Information Center (ALIC). ALIC provides published materials for researchers to use in conjunction with our records. With relevant collections in the National Archives Building in Washington, DC (Archives I), and the National Archives at College Park, MD (Archives II), ALIC is the place for beginning or seasoned researchers to obtain background information about their topic.

ALIC's collections number close to 200,000 volumes, relating to subjects such as American and world history, genealogy, archival science, naval science, military science, and political science. Approximately 25 percent of the general collection is available in room G-30 at Archives I, with the focus on U.S. and world history prior to World War I, genealogy, and state and local history. The rest of the collection is in the library on the 3rd floor at Archives II.

The library at Archives II also houses Government publications. This collection consists of many Federal agency annual reports, telephone directories, reports of programs, court case decisions, and other historical materials. Researchers can search this collection for contextual information about a Government official, program, or agency.

ALIC's online catalog is available on the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) website at www.archives.gov/research/alic/tools/online-public-access-catalog.html. Titles, authors, and subjects are all searchable. Researchers can also search by NARA records cited, by inputting RGxxx in the keyword box. For instance, typing 'RG059' retrieves all books that cite the records of the Department of State.

A similar service, the Quarterly Compilation of Periodical Literature Reflecting the Use of Records in the National Archives, is available on the Web at www.archives.gov/research/alic/periodicals/nara-citations/2009.html. The bibliography is composed of citations to periodical literature citing NARA records, and is updated quarterly. Older citations are compiled by record group cluster semiannually, at www.archives.gov/research/alic/periodicals/nara-citations/index.html.

ALIC also subscribes to several commercial online databases, which are available to researchers onsite. These include HeritageQuest, Biography and Genealogy Master Index, Archive Finder, the Digital National Security Archive, ProQuest, JSTOR, digital editions of the New York Times and the Washington Post, and America: History and Life. For additional information about these resources, see www.archives.gov/research/alic/tools/online-databases.html.

Researchers are encouraged to use ALIC's resources. To increase access, materials can be moved between the two buildings, generally within 24 hours. For further information on any of these resources, please see the librarians at either reference desk, or send your requests to alic@nara.gov.

Carolyn Gilliam grew up in Indianapolis, and received her undergraduate degree from St. Mary-of-the-Woods College in Terre Haute, Indiana. She moved to Vermont with her family, and taught fifth and sixth grades when her four children were in school. In 2002, she entered the University of Maryland’s College of Library and Information Studies. That same year, she began her career at the National Archives as a student library technician at ALIC: the Archives Library Information Center. She received her Master of Library Science in 2004, and then became a permanent member of the ALIC family.

As a student employee, Carolyn began learning how to meet researchers’ needs for information in person, via e-mail, and by telephone. Searching for answers to a wide variety of questions that come in enabled her to become familiar with NARA’s records. She still gets a great deal of pleasure from locating answers dealing with everything from Coast and Geodetic Survey markers to Works Progress Administration (WPA) projects from the 1930s.

For the past two years, Carolyn has worked primarily at the National Archives Building in Washington, DC, where she has the opportunity to work with many researchers who are working on their family histories. In connection with this, she has attended the National Institute on Genealogical Research (NIGR) Conference, created a file of genealogical articles, developed a guide for incarcerated persons who are interested in their family histories, and has participated in the NARA Annual Genealogy Fair as a speaker and ALIC exhibitor.

Recently Carolyn has become involved in maintaining the ALIC web site, especially updating the Reference at Your Desk pages, which are available at www.archives.gov/research/alic/reference/. This has been a rewarding experience, and she hopes to extend this interest into ways to use technology to improve the library’s accessibility to researchers and staff.

Randall Fortson began his career at the National Archives in 2001. As senior reference librarian with the Archives Library Information Center (ALIC), Randall schedules library coverage at both the Archives I and Archives II locations. In coordination with the Chief Librarian, he works closely with student employees by instructing them in library procedures and assigning tasks that are both vital to library functions and designed to provide them with realistic library reference experience. Many of these students have gone on to successful careers as librarians and archivists at NARA and throughout the country.

Randall spends the majority of his time answering researchers’ questions and directing them to sources of information. His primary area of research interest is the antebellum and Civil War periods of United States history. At NARA, this has translated into a love of working with published documents of the United States from the 19th century, and especially the Congressional Serial Set. He occasionally leads monthly book discussions and participates in the Know Your Records program, where he has presented talks on the Official Records of the War of the Rebellion.

Randall also oversees interlibrary loans for NARA staff and is a good person to know if you’re having difficulty finding a book or article in the ALIC collection. If ALIC doesn’t have it, he can identify owner repositories for researchers and usually obtain access via interlibrary loan for staff members in most cases.

Throughout his career, Randall has taught history and government to students, assisted researchers with requested information, or instructed them in various research techniques. He began as a high school social studies teacher and has worked as a reference librarian in public, academic, and special libraries. He holds a Bachelor’s Degree in Education and a Master’s Degree in History from the University of Georgia, and a Master’s Degree in Library and Information Science from the University of South Carolina.

Randall takes great pride in being both a Virginian and a native Georgian. He currently resides in Spotsylvania County, Virginia, just a few miles from where his family migrated south to Georgia in the late 18th century. He likes to visit historic sites, collect recipes, and follows high school football recruiting. He’s also a tremendous fan of the University of Georgia and bleeds red and black for his Bulldogs.

Interesting Facts and Tips About the National Archives

- Published unit histories of Confederate units are located in the reference section of the Archives I library in the series by Stewart Sikafis (E 546.S58). The series includes a volume covering Kentucky, Maryland, and Missouri units organized directly by the Confederate government, as well as Indian units.
- The complete run (1811–49) of Niles’ Weekly Register, a leading weekly U.S. news magazine of the antebellum era, is available in the Archives II library.
- ALIC maintains a collection of genealogical articles. They are available in the Archives I library; if you see one that interests you, please contact the librarian, who will gladly make a copy for you.
- You can locate the library web page by going to www.archives.gov and clicking on the "Researchers" or "Genealogists/Family Historians" links.

Virginia's Freedmen Bureau Records Are Available Online

By Cynthia G. Fox

In July 2009, Governor Timothy M. Kaine announced that the historic Virginia Freedmen’s Bureau records, the earliest major compilation of information on the African American community, have been extracted and indexed, and are now available online to historians and family history researchers. Under the direction of the Black History Museum and Cultural Center of Virginia and in collaboration with FamilySearch, volunteers indexed the records of names, marriages, educational pursuits, labor contracts, health care and legal services and other important information from the Virginia Field Office Records of the Freedmen’s Bureau. The records may now be viewed temporarily at the FamilySearch web site, and negotiations are currently ongoing to permanently host the records through the Smithsonian Institution’s National Museum of African American History and Culture.

This online publication is the ultimate goal for The Freedmen’s Bureau Records Preservation Act of 2000 (Pub. Law 106-444). This law mandated a five-year effort on the part of the National Archives to preserve and microfilm all field office records of the Freedmen’s Bureau (1865–72), totaling about 1.2 million document pages. The microfilm was then digitized by the FamilySearch organization in Utah. In October 2006, Governor Kaine announced that Virginia would be the first state to participate in a historic project to index and digitize the Freedmen’s Bureau records, allowing historians and descendants of emancipated slaves, freed blacks, and black Union soldiers to access historical data, much of which was never before available. By participation in this historically significant project, as well as collaboration with key national organizations, Virginia continues to maintain its prominent role in preserving America’s history and legacies.

Building on Virginia’s trailblazing effort, the project now moves to the remaining states in which the Freedmen’s Bureau had established headquarters. FamilySearch, which initiated this project at the request of the National Archives and Records Administration, will provide direct administrative support for this important second phase of the Freedmen project.

The URL for the pilot of digitized Freedmen’s Bureau records is http://pilot.familysearch.org/recordsearch/start.html#c=141490
The site requires Adobe Flash 10.
Microfilm Rental Program

By Bob Coren

With technological changes in historical research moving from microfilm to digital images online, and the accompanying economic environment, the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) ended its Microfilm Rental Program, effective August 31, 2009. No new orders were filled after July 31. Customers were notified by letter, and customers with balances on deposit accounts—principally public libraries and local historical societies—received checks for the balances on those accounts.

Back in the 1970s and early 1980s, the Microfilm Rental Program was operated by the National Archives regional office in Ft. Worth, Texas. In 1983, NARA awarded a contract to run the program at no cost to the Government to PMDS, a recently formed, woman-owned small business in Annapolis Junction, MD. Under this contract, NARA provided the microfilm of U.S. Census records through 1910 and later provided microfilm of indexes to Revolutionary War military files, and records of the 1920 and 1930 U.S. Censuses. The most recent addition was approximately 1,100 rolls of microfilm of the state and local office records of the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands in Record Group 105.

NARA ended the program for two reasons:

- The amount of revenue produced by the rental program no longer supported its administration and management. We learned this when we attempted to extend the contract and learned that the program costs for PMDS’s successor company, BrightKey, exceeded revenue.

- In addition, for the last several years, as more genealogical information has become available online, particularly from our partners Ancestry.com and Footnote.com, customer demand for renting these microfilm publications has diminished significantly.

This is yet another example of how technology is changing how we conduct historical research.

Individual rolls or a complete set (all rolls in a publication) may now be purchased online, or by mail, telephone, fax, or purchase order (federal agencies). Learn how at www.archives.gov/research/order/microfilm-pubs.html.
New Microfilm Publications
by Claire Prechtel-Kluskens and Rebecca Crawford

The National Archives continues to process accessioned microfilm that provides information about arrivals into the United States and to make available new microfilm publications. Staff recently completed the following National Archives microfilm publications:

These are listed by Record Group (RG) then by microfilm publication number.

Record Group 85, Records of the Immigration and Naturalization Service

- A3450. Records of Aliens Pre-Examined at Saint John, New Brunswick, Canada, ca. 1917–ca. 1952, Prior to Admission at the U.S.-Canada Border. 7 rolls. 16mm.

- A3482. Crew Lists of Vessels Arriving at Toledo, Ohio, August 1929–November 1958. 28 rolls. 35mm.

- A3478. Certificates of Identity Issued to U.S. Citizens Pre-examined at Winnipeg, Manitoba, who Entered the United States at Noyes, Minnesota, and Pembina and Walhalla, North Dakota, 1917–1929. 2 rolls. 16mm.

Record Group 101, Records of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency

- C213, The Freedman’s Savings and Trust Company: Letters Received by the Commissioners, 1870–1914, Part 1: Correspondence, Loans, and Bank Books. 24 rolls.

New Publications by Staff

Periodically, staff publishes articles in order to expand research community awareness of the National Archives’ holdings. By targeting state and local historical and genealogical societies with articles about the agency’s holdings, we hope to reach people who otherwise would not think of the National Archives as a resource for their research. During the past few months, the staff has published the following:

John Deeben (published):

Alison Gavin (published):
- "In the King’s Service: Hugh Finlay and the Postal System in Colonial America," Prologue, Vol. 4, No. 2 (Summer 2009): 6–9.

Constance Potter (published):

Claire Prechtel-Kluskens (published):
The Archives Library Information Center (ALIC) is more than a traditional library. Recognizing that our customers no longer expect to work exclusively within the walls of a library, ALIC provides web pages that are designed to supply convenient access to content beyond the physical holdings of our two traditional libraries.

ALIC provides access to information on American history and government, archival administration, information management, and government documents to staff, archives and records management professionals, and the general public.

Our physical library locations are in the National Archives Buildings in Washington, DC, and College Park, MD. www.archives.gov/research/alic/visit/index.html.

The following books related to the Civil War were recently acquired by the Archives Library Information Center collection at the National Archives at College Park, MD.

- The Cherokee Nation in the Civil War
  by Clarissa W. Confer
  Confer illustrates how the Cherokee Nation, with its sovereign status and distinct culture, had a wartime experience unlike that of any other group of people—and suffered perhaps the greatest losses of land, population, and sovereignty.

The National Archives has added the Enemy Base Area File (BASFA) from the Vietnam War Operations Analysis (OPSANAL) System to the Access to Archival Databases (AAD) online resource. BASFA contains records that define enemy base area locations in South and North Vietnam on a monthly basis, and identify the current status of the base and actions taken against the base. Up to nine boundaries of each base are defined using Universal Transverse Mercator (UTM) coordinates, allowing for the possibility to map out the location and dimensions of the base.

With these records, one can also trace, over time, the general actions taken against enemy bases, such as combat sweeps or reconnaissance missions, and whether the base was considered active, neutralized, or inactive.

BASFA, along with other electronic records series related to the Vietnam War, is available online for searching and viewing at www.archives.gov/aad.

Please contact the electronic records staff at cer@nara.gov with any questions about AAD.

Social Media

Over the past few months, the National Archives and Records Administration’s (NARA) presence online has grown significantly, with several new social media and outreach initiatives under way. We are excited to announce that researchers, staff, and members of the public can now stay up-to-date with NARA events and research opportunities by visiting our new blog, NARAtions, as well as our web pages on Flickr and Facebook. If you have any questions, comments, or ideas about NARA’s work with social media, please feel free to contact us at socialmedia@nara.gov.

NARAtions Blog: We hope that you will share your own experiences, ideas, and questions about online historical research on NARAtions. Our plan is to post periodic discussion questions to get talk on what you like about online public access catalogs and where you think there is room for improvement. The ideas generated so far are great, and we look forward to keeping the discussion going! Visit the National Archives blog at http://blogs.archives.gov/online-public-access/.

Facebook: If you are already on Facebook, come visit NARA’s new research page. On this page you can find links to our Flickr photostream, download The Buzz newsletter, view images and descriptions of highlighted ARC records, and pick up online research tips. While there, ensure that you will always get the latest news as soon as it’s posted by becoming a fan! Visit the National Archives on Facebook at www.facebook.com/pages/Research-at-the-US-National-Archives/129424269765.

Flickr: Visitors are encouraged to share their knowledge, insights, and experience by adding tags and comments to the growing number of NARA images on the photo-sharing web site, Flickr. So far, the pilot project includes over 2,000 photographs from the Women’s Bureau, the Environmental Protection Agency’s DOCUMENTICA project, historic images of NARA events and staff, a variety of “NARA Favorites,” and, thanks to a suggestion sent in by a NARAtions reader, a set highlighting Americans at work in honor of Labor Day. All posted images include corresponding metadata and links to their online catalog descriptions in ARC. While these images make up only a small percentage of our more than 25 million photographs, we are enthusiastic about reaching out to new audiences as well as providing experienced researchers with a fresh perspective on access to the National Archives. Visit the National Archives on Flickr at www.flickr.com/usnationalarchives/.
Digital Project Update

Partnerships Result in Major Holdings Online
by Cynthia G. Fox

Significant textual collections are now available online through the partnership of the National Archives and Records Administration with Family Search, Footnote.com, National Archives Volunteer Association, National Park Service, and The Generations Network. The collections come from records housed at the National Archives at College Park, MD, and Washington, DC.

Civil War Widows’ Pensions

In 2007, a five-year partnership agreement was announced to digitize case files of approved pension applications of widows of Civil War Union soldiers from the holdings of the National Archives. Since that time, the project has continued to expand the records accessible through online images.

Until this project, these records were available only at the National Archives Building in Washington, DC. The widows’ pension application files, a rich source of information about ordinary American citizens of the time, include supporting documents such as affidavits, depositions of witnesses, marriage certificates, birth records, death certificates, and pages from family bibles.

To get an idea of the scope of this project, imagine taking 1.28 million widow’s certificate case files, individually scanning, correctly indexing, and then placing each online. With help from our partners, the pilot project successfully completed 500,000 images from September 2007 through April 3, 2008. Building on this accomplishment, the digitization process continued, and we now have more than 349,062 images online.

How and who helped to make this project a success? The Civil War Conservation Corps volunteers prepared 881 boxes of pensions for scanning. The National Archives Document Conservation and Special Media Labs prepared and digitized documents too large for the regular camera stand. Family Search volunteers digitized 594 boxes (683,155 images). Footnote.com then indexed and uploaded the online images that are available today.

In addition, approved Navy pension applications for the same time period were digitized from the microfiche and are also available at Footnote.com.

Southern Claims Commission Case Files

The Southern Claims Commission was established in 1871 to settle the claims of Southerners who remained loyal to the Union during the Civil War. These records contain valuable genealogical information and are among the most heavily researched of all House records. A typical case file contains the following types of records: a form petition; an application to have testimony taken by a special commissioner; a deposition or testimony of the claimant or a witness; a summary report of the Commissioners of Claims; and miscellaneous papers such as oaths, memoranda, and evidential documents. These give information regarding the claimant, the circumstances of the purchase or seizure of goods, and the value of each item.

In a partnership with Footnote.com, records relating to Southerners (both loyal and not so loyal) during the Civil War are now available online. Barred and disallowed southern claims were among the first records Footnote.com converted from microfilm and posted on the Internet. Following that project, allowed claims for Alabama, Georgia, Virginia, and West Virginia were converted and posted.

Allowed claims submitted from the remaining states including Arkansas, North Carolina, and Tennessee were never microfilmed so are not online at this time. Footnote.com and Family Search has partnered with us to digitize these remaining claim files.

Death Notices in State Department Records

From the earliest days of the republic, one of the duties of U.S. consular officers was to report to the Department of State the names of U.S. citizens who died within their consular districts. These death reports commonly provide acceptable documentation in the English language for cases in which satisfactory proof of an American death might be very difficult to obtain in any other form.

In partnership with The Generations Network, death reports of American citizens abroad are being published online at Ancestry.com. The reports are part of several series including Records of Death Notices (Index), 1835–55 [entry 848]; Notices of Deaths of U.S. Citizens Abroad 1857–1922 [entry 849]; Death Reports in State Department Decimal File, 1910 to 1962; and Reports of Deaths on American Citizens [Abroad] 1963–74 [entry 5166].

Online access to these records is free to researchers using public access computers at any National Archives facility in the United States.

To learn more about records of deaths of U.S. citizens in foreign countries, see www.archives.gov/genealogy/vital-records/american-deaths-overseas.html.
The Know Your Records program offers opportunities for staff, volunteers, and researchers to learn about National Archives records through lectures, ongoing genealogy programs, workshops, symposia, the annual genealogy fair, a genealogy tutorial, and editions of Researcher News.

Free

Genealogy programs include monthly workshops and lectures from our staff archivists with extensive experience in genealogy. We provide lectures on basic genealogical research and techniques and one-on-one assistance. Programs take place each month on the first and third Wednesdays and third Saturday at the National Archives Building.

Free

The Annual Genealogy Fair is held every April at the National Archives Building in Washington, DC. The fair is a free, two-day open house, with guidance on a wide variety of genealogical research topics. The next fair will take place on April 14 & 15, 2010. Save the date!

Free

The From the Records Book Group will meet in Spring 2010 on the third Tuesday of February, March, and May. In order to provide an introduction to the topic of the month’s book, we will hold a related program at 11 a.m. before the book group discussion, which begins at noon in the Adams Room, National Archives Building, Washington, DC. Enter on Constitution Avenue, between 7th and 9th Streets, NW, via the Special Events entrance. The books may be purchased anywhere; the Archives Shop offers a discount to those who are participating in the book group.

Symposia are one- or two-day programs on specific genealogy research topics. Past topics included Hispanic and African American genealogy information and guidance for seasoned professionals and novices alike.
ONGOING GENEALOGY PROGRAMS:

You are invited to attend genealogy programs taking place each month on the first Wednesday and the third Saturday in Room G-24, Research Center of the National Archives Building, Washington, DC (Enter on Pennsylvania Avenue). These programs are free and open to all.

Introduction to Genealogy
On the first and third Wednesdays of the month at 11 a.m. and the third Saturdays at 10 a.m., staff archivists present one-hour lectures on basic genealogical research and techniques, including an introduction to census, military, and immigration records.

“Help! I'm Stuck”
In the afternoon of the third Saturday each month, an archivist with extensive experience in genealogy and the records of the National Archives will be available to assist with your research questions. Upon arrival, please sign up for a 20-minute appointment in the Research Center.

Richard Schneider, National Archives analyst, will discuss the preservation project to reformat deteriorating nitrate film negatives taken by U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) surveyors and topographers of various Alaskan regions in the early 20th century. The project was completed in 2008, so this will be the first public viewing of these panoramas. The discussion will cover preservation, textual records, cartographic records, and access.

DOCUMERICA
Jerry Simmons, National Archives archives specialist, discusses his article “DOCUMERICA: Snapshots of Crisis and Cure in the 1970s” featured in the Spring 2009 issue of Prologue magazine. In the article, Mr. Simmons, takes us back to the environmental crises of the 1970s and the EPA’s photodocumentary project to chronicle changes in the national landscape.

National Archives Online Resources at AAD and ARC
Learn how to search online records on the National Archives Access to Archival Databases (AAD) and Archival Resource Catalog (ARC). Lynn Goodsell and Rebecca Warlow will demonstrate how to use these online resources and the types of records available, such as archived databases and computerized records, as well as selected historical documents, photographs, and images.

National Archives Records on Footnote.com
Laura Prescott from Footnote.com will discuss National Archives records recently scanned and published online through the partnership between the National Archives, Family Search, and Footnote.com.

Patent Records
Ashley Bucciferro, archivist at the National Archives, discusses some of the more famous patent records held at the National Archives in recognition of the 130th anniversary of Thomas Edison’s light bulb patent.

Jill L. Newmark, exhibition specialist and registrar in the History of Medicine Division at the National Library of Medicine, discusses her article “Face to Face with History” in the Fall 2009 issue of Prologue magazine. In the article, Ms. Newmark shares her discovery of William P. Powell, Jr.’s story as an African American surgeon during the Civil War and how National Archives records provide a glimpse into a rarely studied part of history.

George Washington in the Records

In celebration of George Washington’s birthday, Timothy Duskin, National Archives archives technician, will explore the many records held at the National Archives on the first President of the United States. On Tuesday, February 23, please stay in the Adams Room for a noontime discussion on the book The Valley Forge Winter: Civilians and Soldiers in War by Wayne K. Bodle.
Joseph J. Mersman was a liquor merchant, a German American immigrant who aspired—with success—to become a self-made man. The diary he kept from 1847 to 1864 provides an intriguing account of life in Cincinnati and St. Louis—America’s emerging frontier. Outside of Gold Rush diaries and emigration journals, few narrative records of the antebellum period have been published. As a record of both the man and the time in which he lived, The Whiskey Merchant’s Diary: An Urban Life in the Emerging Midwest by Joseph J. Mersman (edited by Linda A. Fisher) is a valuable resource for social historians, providing significant details about bachelorhood, whiskey making, ballroom dancing, circus history, card games, steamboat transportation, gender roles, theater history, and Victorian etiquette. The diary is also the story of a man who confronted serious disease, and his descriptions of cholera and syphilis are exceptional. The late Linda A. Fisher was a public health physician and a trained documentary editor.

George Washington in the Records
In celebration of George Washington’s birthday, Timothy Duskin, National Archives archives technician, will explore the many records held at the National Archives on the first President of the United States.

Noon – Discussion

In celebration of George Washington’s birthday, we will discuss The Valley Forge Winter: Civilians and Soldiers in War by Wayne K. Bodle.

Bodle presents a very different picture of Valley Forge—one that revises both popular and scholarly perceptions. Far from being set in a wilderness, the Continental Army’s quarters were deliberately located in a settled area. And although there was a provisions crisis, Washington overstated the case in order to secure additional support. (A shrewd man, Washington generally succeeded at keeping his army supplied with food, clothing, and munitions. Farmers from the interior provided food that ensured that the army didn’t starve.) As for von Steuben’s role in training the soldiers, Bodle argues that it was not the decisive factor others have seen in the army’s later victories. The freshness of Bodle’s approach is that he offers a complete picture of events both inside and outside the camp boundaries. We see what happens when two armies descend on a diverse and divided community. Anything but stoically passive, the Continentals were effective agents on their own behalf and were actively engaged with their civilian hosts and British foes. The Valley Forge Winter is an example of the “new military history” at its best—a history that puts war back into its social context.

Noon – Discussion

In recognition of Women’s History month, we will discuss Our Mothers’ War: American Women at Home and at the Front during World War II by Emily Yellin.

Our Mothers’ War is an eye-opening and moving portrait of women during World War II, a war that forever transformed the way women participate in American society. Never before has the vast range of women’s experiences during this pivotal era been brought together in one book. Now, Our Mothers’ War re-creates what American women from all walks of life were doing and thinking, on the home front and abroad. These heartwarming and sometimes heartbreaking accounts of the women we have known as mothers, aunts, and grandmothers reveal facets of their lives that have usually remained unmentioned and unappreciated.

Noon – Discussion

In recognition of the 145th anniversary since President Lincoln’s assassination, we will discuss Manhunt: The 12-Day Chase for Lincoln’s Killer by James L. Swanson.

The murder of Abraham Lincoln set off the greatest manhunt in American history—the pursuit and capture of John Wilkes Booth. From April 14 to April 26, 1865, the assassin led Union cavalry troops on a wild, 12-day chase from the streets of Washington, DC, across the swamps of Maryland, and into the forests of Virginia. Manhunt is a fully documented work, but it is also a fascinating tale of murder, intrigue, and betrayal. A gripping hour-by-hour account told through the eyes of the hunted and the hunters, this is history as you’ve never read it before.
