

Your Army Reports: Number 6

Sergeant Major Jack Saunders: I am Sergeant Major Jack Saunders, your host for this issue of The Big Picture. 1966 was a critical year for the United States Army; a year that saw a major combat force deployed to the Far East to implement our government's support of a free South Vietnam. On Your Army Reports today, we bring you some of the personalities and events of 1966 that made Army history, that gave new inspiration to the American fighting man and new meaning to the high principle of justice which he defends.

Narrator: This is Ettelbruck, Luxembourg, a quaint European city made famous in World War II by an American soldier. Each year a ceremony is held honoring the memory of General George S. Patton, Jr., who launched an historic attack from this region in the critical Battle of the Bulge in 1944. This is Ettelbruck's twenty-first annual Remembrance Day honoring General Patton's contribution to World War II victory. As part of the observance, United States Army skydivers demonstrate parachuting skills which play an important part [...]
