The press releases include fact sheets, announcements, and proclamations on Latin American issues including economic reform, elections, the Enterprise for the Americas Initiative, foreign aid, and trade and investment agreements; the printed material consists of newspaper clippings on issues such as human rights, economic aid, humanitarian aid, TV Marti, Enterprise for the Americas, the drug war, and the Puerto Rican statehood referendum; the remarks were released by the Press Office of President Bush, Vice President Quayle, and various administration officials and address free trade agreements, investment, and drug control strategies. The testimonies are from various agencies to Congressional and Senate committees on counter-narcotics efforts, trade policy, the Enterprise for the Americas Initiative, and NAFTA; and the reports are from President Bush to Congress regarding the Panama Canal Treaties and the Angola-Namibia Accords. There are also reports on trade and human rights.
