I offer a minor word change in the attached to make this more clear.

In my July 2nd letter to State I raised the completeness issue by writing, "I would therefore appreciate continuing updates on the current status of these activities [the various investigations] to the extent possible, particularly where the investigations may reveal that the collection Secretary Clinton provided to the Department is incomplete."

FOIA (b)(5)

Since we've already identified completeness as a potential concern,

Gary,

This looks mostly good to me ... the only glaring thing I saw in the text itself was in the Introduction, page one, I think the sentence that begins "Second, events since plaintiffs filed (not "failed" as written) their suits have" should be fixed.

FOIA (b)(5)

Not in the text, [REDACTED] NARA did not determine that over 1000 of the emails were personal on its own, as the comment implies. Rather, NARA reviewed the work State completed regarding the personal email review and determination, and more or less confirmed State's judgement on the personal email determinations. This may appear to be a distinction without a difference, but whatever record of this – even in notes like this – should be clear.

Thanks, Paul
